EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

SENATOR THURMAN has little hope of a Democratic victory in Ohio this fall.

BARR stock does not rise very rapidly. Some of his friends ought to start a boom.

SECRETARIES SHERMAN and Schurz have began an active campaign in Ohio, and politics are becoming lively.

WHAT has become of Ben. Butler? Is he, like Tilden, on a still hunt, or has some one been kind enough to kidnap him?

SECRETARY SCHURZ delivered a rousing speech at Cincinnati last Wednesday night, and was greeted with a tremendous audience.

THE Wallace Committee held its final session in Boston Aug. 20th. It will assemble again in New York after the November elections.

IT'S about time for some Northern Democrat to propose Jeff Davis for President. Tilden and Davis would sound "loud," and tickle the South immensely.

FRANCE is looking after her fish interests. A bill has been pending in the French Senate for instituting an inquiry into the means of increasing the fish production of her rivers.

THE reports published week before last in regard to the death of Mrs. Sartoris, daughter of ex-President Grant, were unfounded. The mistake arose from the death of Mrs. E. J. Sartoris, formerly Adelaide Kemble.

THE Zulu war is not yet terminated. Cetywayo is not yet captured, and all the principal chiefs of the coast district say that hostilities may be resumed at any time while he is at large. Sir Garnet Wolseley is not as jubilant as he was.

ACCORDING to a number of prominent Democrats it is the intention of the Democracy to revive the "fraud issue" in Congress next winter, and make it the leading question in the Presidential campaign. Well, we don't ask for anything easier to overcome than the "fraud" howl.

SOME Democratic reform is greatly needed in Yazoo county, remarks an exchange. Yes, it is needed, but not wanted out that way. All the Democratic cut-throats in that section want is a shot-gun and someone to shoot at. Any other kind of reform is, to them, contaminating.

WHAT makes the Democratic leaders squirm in Ohio is the fact that large numbers of Democrat flock to hear Sherman and Schurz lay down the true principle of National Government. They are afraid that, after listening to these able men, they will be convinced that they are on the wrong track, and switch off.

THE Tribune gives the Greenbackers this gentle nudge: "There was danger of a drought in Maine, and the Greenbackers were looking forward to the prospect of the mills stopping as a big gun in their favor. But the three-days' storm came along and filled the creeks and dams and spoiled many a doleful argument. It does seem as if Providence was fighting against the Greenbackers."

MISSISSIPPI bulldozers are beginning to show their hands again. On Wednesday of last week Henry M. Dixon, Independent candidate for sheriff of Yazoo county, was shot dead by James Barksdale, the regular Democratic candidate. Dixon helped organize an independent party some time ago, since which time he had been the object of deep animosity in Yazoo county, and "old and respected citizens," not being willing to tolerate such "impudence" on the part of Dixon, thought it best to remove him.

The Nation.

The Watchman of last week in an editorial under the above caption, becomes enthusiastic in emphatically reasserting that we, the people of the United States, are not a nation, in the following language: The Watchman reasserts that "we are not a nation, and the REPUBLICAN is for once entirely right when it asserts that it does so in obedience to its natural instincts. We advocated and defended the Jeffersonian theory of State rights, when a bayonet was ready at the throat of every citizen who dared condemn and protest against the outrageous tyranny of arbitrary military, or what is the same 'national' power, and we shall not remain quiet now and tamely listen to the mouthings of the descendants of the Tory brood of the revolution without entering a protest that shall be heard and understood."

This is a very remarkable expression even to appear in the columns of the Watchman.

We fully appreciate the candor with which the Watchman declares its views of our country by asserting boldly and unqualifiedly that we are not a nation.

We also appreciate the fact that even the Watchman accords us sufficient penetration to impute the secession and anarchical views of government entertained and advocated by it to their proper source—its natural instincts. Naturally, then, the Watchman, by its own admissions, is in favor of secession. Naturally, it is in favor of the individual State predominating over the nation, and making the general government inferior and subordinate to the State government. The Watchman glories in the fact that it always "advocated and defended the Jeffersonian theory of State rights, when a bayonet was ready at the throat of every citizen who dared condemn and protest against the outrageous tyranny of arbitrary military, or what is the national power."

Just what the Watchman means by this very extraordinary expression we must confess we are rather too stupid to comprehend. Will the Watchman please explain what it means by the "Jeffersonian theory of State rights?" We have always been led to believe from what we have read in history, that Thomas Jefferson was very much in favor of the formation of the general government, and believed in the exercise of national power. If the exercise of national power be an outrageous tyranny of arbitrary military power, as asserted by the Watchman, then we are in sorry plight. How the exercise of national power has deprived the citizens of Centre county, and of the State of Pennsylvania, of their rights and liberties as citizens! How it has robbed them of their property, and enslaved them by its outrageous tyranny of arbitrary military power!

But the Watchman boasts that it had the courage to protest and condemn when a bayonet was at the throat of every one who dared do so.

Marvelous courage and heroism! The time alluded to must have been during the rebellion. The Watchman then advocated and defended the Jeffersonian theory of State rights as it denominates it. If the Watchman denominates the course it pursued during the rebellion, as defending the Jeffersonian theory of State rights, then we gather a more intelligent idea of its language.

Yes, we remember well how it defended State rights during the war. So do the boys who wore the blue. Its columns were full of vile treason secession. It denominated Lincoln "the despot and tyrant." The boys in blue it denominated "Lincoln hirelings," "chicken thieves" and "raiders," "poltroons," and every possible scurrilous and degrading epithet of which that sheet is capable. It lauded traitors as patriots, and patriots it condemned as traitors. It had encouragement and cheer for rebels, but condemnation and curses for patriots. It exulted over rebel victories and union defeats, and mourned and complained over rebel defeats and union victories. Its course during the war is the part of its career in which it now glories. The vile treason it advocated then, and the scurrilous abuse it heaped upon the Union soldier, and the fulsome flattery it heaped upon rebels, it it denominates now have been a heroic and brave defense and advocacy of the Jeffersonian theory of State rights.

This is the first time we ever heard that Thomas Jefferson was the author of treason and the father of secession.

We are glad the Democracy are getting so bold and have again unfurled the stars and bars, as their banner, and have prepared to again trample the stars and stripes into the dust. We are glad that the Democratic party is making the issue of secession boldly, and are not endeavoring to evade it. Four or five years ago when we charged them with still entertaining treason against the government they denied it. Now they admit it and raise the issue.

We meet them squarely upon it. And although we thought that four long years of bloody war, and the sacrifice of a million human lives, and thousands of millions of treasure, had fully settled the question of the power of the government to preserve itself and maintain the Union, yet it seems we must again meet the question at the ballot box.

An intelligent and patriotic people will settle it there, as they settled it by the bullet and bayonet something over fourteen years ago.

The Yazoo County Murder.

The Philadelphia North American makes the following pointed remarks concerning the late shooting affair in Yazoo county, Miss., in which the shot-gun argument was brought into use:

"The great defect in the Yazoo method—and it is the southern method slightly intensified—is, that to convince an opponent is to reduce him to a corpse. As arguments, buckshot may be considered solid. They are commonly effective also. Projected from the muzzle of a shot-gun, they are more persuasive than logic, or history, or both, when the latter are delivered by such orators as Webster and Clay, and such logicians as Calhoun. Yet there is something about the Yazoo method that bars its popularity among commonplace people. They did these things better in ancient times—say in Athens and elsewhere on the eve of great events. They tried argument, and the quips of philosophy upon each other; and when a noble Greek waxed too fat and proved hard to withstand, they sometimes invite him to drink hemlock or fall upon his sword. That was a definite method of persuasion. But in Yazoo, when a noble Yazooan finds himself unable to meet the arguments of another, he empties a double-barrelled shot-gun into that other. Whether that mode of argument brings an opponent over to the shooter's views of matters and things or not, nobody seems to know; but the silence that follows may pass for assent. The Yazoo affair is purely a Democratic one, and perhaps it is presumptuous in a Republican journal to meddle with it. Mr. Dixon, to whom Mr. Barksdale's leaden arguments were directed, was himself a dabster in shot-gun logic. He had won the cup so long ago as 1875, when the Mississippi plan was carried out so effectively. It was a massive silver pitcher, and the inscription thereupon read as follows: "To the bravest of the brave, Captain Henry M. Dixon. Presented to him by his Democratic fellow-citizens of Yazoo county, as an humble testimonial of their high appreciation of his brilliant services in the redemption of the county from radical rule in 1875."

Now that he is dead, one Mr. W. D. Hughes, of Yazoo City, comes forward and gives a reason, or rather several reasons, why the people should rejoice rather than mourn because of his sudden taking off. "He was a violent man, full of prejudice," says this witness, and to prove it adds: "I have seen him shoot the head off a pigeon at one hundred yards." That, we conclude, settles the question as to the violence of his propensities. It also clearly enough illustrates his prejudices. Putting one's self in the pigeon's place, Mr. Dixon must have appeared as a dangerous man, with inveterate prejudices against pigeon well-being. Speaking for the pigeon tribe, it is impossible not to say that Mr. Barksdale conferred a great boon upon that family of animated nature. But he was not dangerous to the pigeons only, for his biographer declares that he was "a fascinating man, liked by all the women." Speaking for the fellows who do not succeed with the fair, we should say that such fellows were under great obligations to Mr. Barksdale. It will never do to have all the women running after one man. This is something worse than shooting the head from a pigeon at one hundred yards. To sum up the estimation in which the dead man was held, the biographers say: "He was a murderer, a gambler, a bully, a thief; a man of violence, of blood, of lies; a man who packed juries; a low, unprincipled demogugue in politics, and an infidel in religion." All this coming four years after the same persons had presented Dixon with a massive silver pitcher, because of his high and exhalted patriotism, is rather bewildering. And we ask, with due reference to southern chivalry, on which occasion did they lie?"

Around the World.

The Woodruff expedition around the world, which it was thought would be abandoned, owing to the death of James Orton Woodruff, the projector, we are happy to state expects to start during the coming winter. This is one of the most important projects of an educational character that has ever been brought before the public, and as there may be some of our readers who are not familiar with the nature of the enterprise, we will devote a little space to a description of it.

James Orton Woodruff, the projector and first director of the expedition, was born in Auburn, New York, July 25, 1840. He received an English education, and at the age of twenty-one enlisted in the army, serving as first lieutenant of artillery for two years. His health failing, he went to Louisiana, and afterward to Florida, where he engaged in the cultivation of oranges. While in Florida he conceived the idea of a floating college to circumnavigate the globe, and furnish to young men strict discpline, a good literary and scientific education, and the privilege of seeing the world under the most favorable conditions.

He presented his ideas to the leading scientists and educators throughout the country, and met with so much encouragement that he determined to organize an expedition. Having obtained authority from Congress by a special act, he went to Europe and there contracted for a suitable steamship for the expedition. The vessel named the General Werder, is an iron screw steamer, 351 feet 3 inches long, 39 feet 2 inches in breadth, and 31 feet deep, with registered tonage of 3,020 tons. After being approved by the Secretary of the Navy, the interior of the vessel was remodeled and fitted expressly for the expedition. The officers of the expedition are a director, business manager, officers of the vessel and members of the faculty. The faculty is to be composed of not less than ten men of established reputation as instructors in their respective departments of learning, and one or more members of the faculty are to accompany each excursion party that goes from the vessel. Arrangements have been made for two hundred students, who must be not less than fifteen years of age, of good moral character, well versed in the common branches of an English education, and who must bring satisfactory testimonials from pastors and teachers in regard to character and scholarship. The total cost of membership is fixed at $3000. This is for transportation, board, tuition, books, uniform and all necessary expenses, both on the ship and on shore. The proposed route is from New York to the Mediterranean, where several months will be spent in studying and visiting what ever is noteworthy in Italy, Greece, Turkey, Palestine and Egypt. With returning summer the expedition will sail for Northern Europe, visiting the principal cities, including Paris, London, Edinburg, Copenhagen, Stockholm, St. Petersburg, Berlin and Amsterdam. In the autumn of 1880, the expedition will again enter the Mediterranean, pass through the Suez canal, explore India, China and Japan, thence to the coast of Siberia. From these northern latitudes it will go again to the tropical Zone, making an examination of the wonderful volcanoes and lovely scenery of the Hawaiian Islands; then through the Golden Gate and enter the harbor of San Francisco. Here the students will leave the vessel, and after paying a visit to the "big trees," the falls of the Yosemite, and whatever is worthy of attention, will cross the Rocky Mountains and return home, spending a day or two at Chicago, Niagara, etc.

The expedition which, since the death of Mr. Woodruff, has been under the directorship of William Smith Clark, L. L. D., late president of the State College, of Massachusetts, will publish an illustrated weekly journal, 10x13 inches, which will be edited by the faculty and illustrated by artists accompanying the expedition. This journal, which will be published on board the ship, will be completed in seventy-eight numbers of eight pages each, making a volume of six hundred and twenty four pages of science and travels, containing more matter than Stanley's Through the Dark Continent, and considering the ability of its editors and the facility they will have procuring interesting material for its columns, we have no doubt it will be a most welcome visitor in every household.

THE murderers of Joseph F. Frye, of Boston, have been secured. Three men planned the bloody work and two executed it. Their names are Antonia Ardito, a Greek, and Nicolo Infantium, a Sicilian. They are both barbers by trade, and Mr. Frye showed a great preference for the young Sicilian, who invariably shaved him and often visited him at his residence. In this way an intimacy sprang up between them. The Sicilian took advantage of this intimacy, and learned all he could of the wealth and importance of Mr. Frye, communicating his knowledge to his friends, who concocted the murder.

SAN FRANCISCO is agitated over a shooting affair. The Rev. Isaac S. Kalloch, the workingmen's candidate for Mayor, was shot on Saturday morning by Charles De Young, the senior proprietor of the San Francisco Chronicle. The shooting grew out of a political controversy, and California can now move up and take her place alongside of Mississippi. An account of this disgraceful affair will be found in another column.

REPUBLICAN voters, are you registered?

When Mr. Hastings was in a more cheerful frame of mind, he wrote that one of the advantages of residing in a nearby wateringplace is the facility afforded to the gentle sex to come to town frequently on shopping expeditions, under the protection of some gentleman friend on his way to business. As a means of indulging in quiet flirtation, either by boat or train, it is perhaps superior to beach or piazza. Those who have been in the habit of enjoying these occasional trips find it altogether dull when they are discontinued through a return to town or other causes. If the ladies only knew how they varied the monotony of every day journeying, they would probably come to the city oftener.

Four Senators dined with Senator Burnside last Monday evening at his home in Bristol—Beck, of Kentucky; Rollins, of New Hampshire; Chandler, of Michigan, and Butler, of South Carolina.

Newspaper Jottings.

To-day is always here; to-morrow never. All bores are hereby invited to call around to-morrow.

—The Local Lever of Seymour, Ind., succeeds the Democrat of that place, being printed at the same office.

—The Buffalo Express has a faint suspicion that the Tichborne claimant is one of the editors of the World.

—The religious editor of the Chicago Times, says that, after all, this kind of weather can't compete with hell.

—The editor of the Elmira Advertiser says a little religion is a dangerous thing; so he doesn't have any at all.

—The antipathy of some papers to Captain Boynton is explained by the fact that he uses a patent outside.—Puck.

—The Bristol, Vt., Herald and the Burlington Sunday Chronicle are the latest newspaper ventures in that State.

—The proprietors of the weekly People and Patriot, Concord, N. N., now issue a daily edition by the same name.

—The first number of the Western Star, published at Hill City, Graham county, Kansas, has just made its appearance.

—Mr. Whitelaw Reid's recent address at Rochester on "Some Aspects of Journalism" will be published in book form.

—Thomas F. McGrath, one of the proprietors of the Rhinebeck, N. Y., Gazette, was married recently to Miss Ida J. Asher.

—The newspaper man sticks to his desk, and never goes to sea, but he seldom gets to be ruler of the United States Navee.

—It is reported that the English Government intends to start a printing office, instead of paying out £136,000 annually.

—The Washington Sunday Republic has passed into the hands of Mr. H. J. Ramsdell, who will become editor and publisher.

—A large party of Bostonians are making a tour of the West, including Messrs. Pulsifer and Haskell of the Boston Herald.

—The Washington World and the Department Review, both published at Washington, D. C., are recent acquisitions to the ranks.

—"Why do men lie?" asks the Washington Post. As well might he ask "how doth the little busy bee delight to bark and bite?"

—Two compositors on the Philadelphia Record, T. O. Lambert and J. B. Gaither, are reported to have drawn $7,500 each in a lottery.

—Joe Prior, one of the best journalists in the State, is making a splendid paper of the Decatur, Ill., Sun, which he has just leased.

—An old lady being asked to subscribe to a newspaper, declined on the ground that when she wanted news she manufactured it herself.

—Ham. Wicks, formerly of Milwaukee, and later of Chicago, has started for Australia, where he intends to open a newspaper bureau.

—Todd & Edes have commenced the publication of a neat seven-column paper at Marshall, Minn., entitled the Lyon County News.

—John M. Cannon has begun the publication of a four-page weekly, called the Standard, at Tunkhannock, Pa. It is Democratic in politics.

—The edition of the New York Weekly World is now nearly 100,000 copies per week. It is the result of skilful and judicious advertising.

—Thomas H. Bryant, formerly a Fon du Lac., Wis., printer and publisher, has assumed the business management of the Omaha, Neb., Bee.

—The three Ionia, Mich., papers, the Sentinel, Standard and National, are all printed on one press, a Potter cylinder, owned by the Sentinel Co.

—Mrs. Emma D. E. N. Southworth says she has written constantly ever since she was fifteen years old. She is now at work on her sixtieth novel.

—Albion N. Merchant, of newspaper fame in Burlington, Vt., has established a paper called the Rhode Island Democrat, at Providence, R. I.

Poetry.

MY LOVE.

D. BRAINERD WILLIAMSON.

No breezes blow
That ever stop to kiss a cheek.
Or brow of snow,
Or pensive eyes, or heart so meek,
As these of one I know.

'Tis like a rose——
The cheek the wanton zephyrs kiss——
For in it glows
The swift blood-pulsing of a bliss
That from a pure font flows.

No parlor snows
Are ever whiter than her brow——
No white, white rose
Of June I ever will allow
Its glory to oppose.

And those sweet eyes!
No stars that in the ether shine——
That bless the skies
With their soft light, and orbs divine——
So much of Peace comprise.

And that dear heart!
What with it is there to compare?
Free from all art,
Its love and happiness I share,
And am of it a part.

—Saturday Night.

"GRANDPA'S GONE HOME."

BY MRS. M. A. KIDDER.

Oh, how we miss him in the little household,
The dear, old man we never can forget;
So gentle with us children, and so patient.
A child himself, and quite as much a pet
As was the baby with its curls of gold;
The two extremes of life, the young and old!

Grandpa's gone Home! He is not dead, it seemeth;
He went so easy with no spasms of pain;
His dear head drooping with its locks of silver;
His dear lips closing ne'er to smile again.
We look with sorrow on his empty chair,
Still placed within the warmest corner there.

The sweetest flowerets in the garden growing,
The ripest berries, or the choicest dish
That graced our humble board, were saved for grandpa;
And every one obeyed his slightest wish;
While like young birds that twitter on a tree,
The chattering little ones would climb upon his knee.

Ah! that to us was the supremest moment,
The happy time when little ears inclined
To listen to some strange through oft-told story
Of grandpa's youth, that seemed to haunt his mind;
Perhaps some battle tale, grand in its time,
Some boyish prank, or bits of ancient rhyme

Grandpa's gone Home! Away from earthly sorrow,
His Bible rests still on the little stand,
His gold-rimmed spectacles lay just beside;
He will not need them in the better land!
Oh! how we miss him where'er we roam;
May we all meet him in his heavenly home.

Our Story Teller.

The Truest Charity.

Miss Lacy's elegant carriage was standing at the curbstone, in front of a door on which a silver plate announced the name of "Lyman Forth, M. D.;" and Miss Lacy's liveried coachman sat solid and stylish on the box, having about all he could do to manage the restless, beautiful pair of bays.

Miss Lacy's footman stood in silent, respectful waiting, at the open door of the carriage—although making an aristocratic, imposing spectacle, at which Dr. North's handsome blue eyes wandered occasionally, as, in his office, from his seat by the window, he was talking to Miss Lacy.

Not that the young lady was not worth all his attention—all the attention any man could pay her, aside from her position in society, and her most unlimited wealth; for a sweeter face was never lifted in girlish enthusiasm than hers, as, her big, gray eyes, glowing darkly, her voice thrilling and earnest, she was telling Doctor North and his friend, another aspiring young M. D., a tale of suffering, and sorrow, and want, she had come across on one of her charity visits; and, in her sweet, gracious way, asking for their subscriptions on her list to ameliorate the sickness, the sorrow, and the want.

Doctor North listened, and looked from her lovely face, her elegant toilet, to the establishment outside, and smiled in concurrence with her views.

"Certainly, I will be delighted to do my little share, Miss Lacy. Put me down for fifty dollars on your list. I wish I could make it more. Jasper, here, will supplement it, of course."

Nellie smiled delightedly, showing the distracting dimple in one peachy cheek, and her beautiful white teeth, so pearly an even.

"Oh, Doctor North, what a generous donation! Why, I had no idea you would subscribe so largely. No one has been so liberal yet that I have asked."

Doctor North bowed in response to her impulsive little thanks.

"Don't speak of it; it really is not worth mentioning. It is a double pleasure you have afforded me, Miss Lacy, that of being some actual, practical benefit to your charity cases, as well as—I hope—pleasing you."

He gave her an ardent little look, that brought a swift little flush to Nellie's cheeks, and a certain delightful quickening of her heart-throbs, that more than once had similarly happened in connection with Doctor North's handsome blue eyes, and facinating smile, and melodious voice.

"You are very, very good," she answered, lifting her sweet eyes for just one second—long enough to create fresh havoc and new elation in Doctor North's heart; and he glanced from the pure, glorious, girlish face, to the elegant equipage outside, with a very self-satisfied expression on his face.

While Nellie turned to Doctor Jasper, grave, refined, standing beside the mantle, watching the little play go on, a stern, curious look in his thoughtful, fine eyes.

He did not give her an opportunity to ask him.

"Miss Lacy, I regret very much that I am not able to afford adding a subscription to your list. If it were possible—if I could conscientiously do it—believe me, I would no t refuse you; but it is impossible."

His voice was quiet, self-possessed, and remarkably sweet and manly, and he looked squarely in her eyes as he made his grave, courteous regrets.

Just the merest, faintest suggestion of displeasure and coolness crept over her face as she listened, then inclined her hand in her gracious, set, haughty way.

"I am sure you know best, Doctor Jasper. Pray pardon me for having annoyed you!"

She stuffed the fresh, crisp fifty-dollar greenback in her little portemonnaie, bowed her adieu, just tinged with a little feminine pique, to Doct r Jasper, into whose eyes a half-amused little smile crept as he gravely returned it—then to Doctor North, with a charming graee and a bewitching smile:

"I shall never, never forget what a grand, kind heart you have, Doctor North. And do be sure, please, and remember to be at my next Thursday evening!"

He assisted her in her satin-cushioned carriage, and ventured to slightly pr ss her pearl-kidded hand at parting, while Nellie, her face slightly flushed, turned impulsively to the quiet-looking, elderly lady, in black silk, on the front seat.

"Isn't he just too splendid for anything, Aunt Annie?"

Mrs. Laurence smiled oddly.

"If you think so, dear. Tastes differ, however."

Nellie flashed an indignant little look at the calm, gold-spectacled eyes.

"Oh, a ntie! Why, he gave me fifty-dollars for the O'Bannigan family!"

"And he'd better have kept it, to my thinking. And where next, Nellie?"

While in Dr. Lyman North's aristocratic office, with its velvet carpets on reception and private rooms, its plush furniture, and paintings on the frescoed walls, its rich draperies at the windows, that gentleman was sitting complacently in his official chair, his hands in his pockets, his handsomely-booted feet stretched out, and returning Jasper's sarcastic look.

"Well, you look as though you didn't approve, Phil."

"I don't!" he returned, shortly. "The idea of you giving away fifty-dollars just because the fair beggar happens to be Miss Lacy, the heiress!" You can no more afford it than I can, North. Your practice is no larger or better. You told me, not ten minutes before she came in, that you were still in debt for all this," indicating by a nod of his head the adornment of the suit of rooms.

North smiled.

"That's a fact, Phil. I'm running behind every day, and I owe the best part of a thousand dollars. All the same, I never made a better investment in my life than when I gave Miss Lacy that last dollar I have in the world."

Jasper looked surprised.

"I see you don't take," Doctor North said, lightly. "Its just this, in a nutshell: I'm resolved to marry Miss Lacy, if I can."

For just one second, an inscrutable look swept across Jasper's fine, thoughtful face.

"Or her money—which?" he asked, with a little sharp bitterness in his voice.

"Both," Doctor North answered. "Do you consider me too ambitious?"

Doctor Jasper frowned slightly.

"My opinion might not be agreeable, Lyman, and——"

North interrupted, with a laugh: "As it evidently was not to the 'fair beggar.' How in the world had you the courage to tell her—actually tell her—you could not afford it?"

All the nobility in Philip Jasper's nature looked out of his dark eyes.

"How could you give her—actually give her—money that was really not your own to give?"

"I can't see it in that light," North retorted, lighting a cigar.

Then the subject was dropped, and Doctor Jasper went away to his rounds of duties that, day in and day out, he conscientiously performed, making for his name and skill a sure, if slow, foundation that would one day be a glorious structure to his credit.

* * * * * * *

Nellie Lacy's gentle eyes were full of womanly pity and sympathy, and she sat patiently listening to Fannie O'Brien's story; and Fannie was her up-stairs girl—a faithful, intelligent creature, in whom and whose affairs the sweet young mistress had always taken the warmest interest.

"And it is small-pox your mother has? Oh, Fannie, that is terrible—terrible! Of course it will not be right for you to come here among us from her, and of course you must go to her and take the best care you can of her. Don't worry about your wages—they will go right on; and, after the doctor thinks it safe, you must come back. What doctor have you, Fannie?"

A fresh burst of sobs came from the girl's quivering lips.

"Indade an that's the sore trouble, ma'am! It's sivin or eight docthers I've been after, and niver a wan'll go to my ould mother, bekase its a bad disase; and I'll not have her took to the hospital, ma'am, not if I dies wid her in the house!"

Nellie's brow contracted in a surprisek, thoughtful frown, and a look of indignation was in her eyes.

"No doctor will go? Why, I never heard of such a thing! I thought doctors always went wherever they were called, auntie," and she turned impetuously toward placid Mrs. Laurence, sewing at a window opposite. "What do you think of such cruel, heathenish behavior?"

Mrs. Laurence looked up, a funny little smile on her lips.

"I simply think that Fannie has happened to call the wrong physician, that is all. Have you been for Doctor North, Fannie?"

The girl shook her heard.

"North—North, ma'am? No ma'am. Its a stranger he is to me."

"He'd go in a minute," Nellie said, a dainty little flush on her cheeks. "He is none of your cowardly physicians; he is a generous, noble, charitable gentleman, a friend of mine, and I know he'll look after your mother, small-pox notwithstanding."

Mrs. Laurence smiled ever so coldly.

"And then there's young Doctor Jasper—my favorite, you know. He would go, I am pretty sure."

Nellie's lip curled.

"How strange you are, auntie! Why, he is the most distant, haughty, proud, stingy man I ever saw! Go? He'd quicker put his head in the fire. But Doctor North will go. Fannie, I'll put on my wraps and go around to his office with you."

And, to the poor creature's grateful delight, Miss Nellie Lacy actually accompanied her to Doctor North's office-door, when the bell being answered by the colored boy, Fannie, with true Irish impetuosity, blurted out her message—the message that came so straight from her true, troubled heart.

"Its the docther I be wantin'—Doctor North—to go at once to see me darlin' ould mother, a-lyin' sick wid the smhall-pox, and ravin' like a loonatick, and——"

The loud-spoken, intense words, that Nellie could not check in their eager flow, reached Doctor North's ears, as he sat in his cosy office, with brilliant gaslight, and one or two choice books, and a box of cigars, making it very congenial to his tastes.

"Put her out, Lockery! We don't want the small-pox here! Tell her to go to the police station for a hospital surgeon. Shut the door, Lockery, if you dont want to catch it. The low, dirty Irish Biddies are too impudent for anything!"

But Fannie's buxom arm kept the terrified little darkey from obeying his orders, and her voice retorted, loud and anguishful, and Nellie did not try to quiet her:

"And would yez let me mother die like a dog, Doctor North? For shwate mercy's sake, go wid us, docther, and I'll——"

Nellie heard a quick, agry footstep coming toward the door, and she shrank back into the darkness just as Doctor North appeared.

"Clear out, I tell you! What do you suppose I care whether the old woman dies or lives?"

The door was slammed sharp in their faces.

For one second Nellie's eyes flashed, then a little smile crept to them.

"Never mind, Fannie; I am just a little mistaken in Doctor North. We'll go to auntie's choice now, and somehow I begin to think he is the one."

They met Doctor Jasper just leaving his office, and, at a word from Nellie, Fannie addressed him, telling her pitiful story with true Irish eloquence.

Doctor Jasper listened patiently, gravely.

"You are quite sure it is small-pox?"

"The ould woman says so, sir. If yez would only come!"

"I'll go in half an hour. Give me your street and number, and go to a drug store and get this prescription filled, and give it to her just as soon as you get home. Keep her warm, and as quiet as possible. I guess it will be all right; I'll do all I can anyhow."

He stepped back into the light of his office window, and wrote a prescription; and Nellie, watching him, wondered where the cold, haughty look was she had seen so plainly before.

Then he went on, and Fannie escorted her young mistress home, to be well-freighted with needful necessaries and a few little luxuries, and a month's wages in advance, before she went to her own little third-floor rear room.

Nellie went down stairs into the dusky parlors, and thought over the odd little adventure of the evening; and the result was that, when Doctor North attended her Thursday evening, he was quite astonished to account for Miss Lacy's cold courtesy, instead of the charming graciousness he had expected, and most ardently desired.

And as he never received a second invitation he became satisfied that something had happened—something he never knew, until a year or so after, when Nellie Lacy was Doctor Jasper's wife; and then, by some mysterious means, he learned how it had all happened. And he knew he was deserving of his received deserts.

Deafness is often radically cured by putting shark's oil or glycerine into the ears for a few nights. It causes the ear to discharge, and thereby relieves them from the wax inside, that hardens there and is one of the principal causes of deafness. It is perfectly harmless.

The cabins on the Atlantic Steamers bound for America have been all engaged for the month of August, and so difficult is it to get a state room for any passage during the next two months that premiums of £20 are offered and find no takers.

The Goddess Unveiled.

The Girl Whose Face is Stamped on the Bland Dollar.

There probably never has been a coin issued by the Government which has created so much talk and discussion as the Bland dollar. It has been subjected to ridicule from the awkward position of the bird of freedom, which holds a place on the reverse side. It has been praised for the beautiful profile of the young lady's face, which is shown on the front. The interest in the coin was heightened when it was whispered that the features were intended to represent the true type of American beauty, as distinguished from that of any other nationality. Further than this, it was quietly asserted that the young lady was a reality, and that the face was no ideal sketch of an artist's fancy. Those who were in the secret kept their mouths sealed as to who the lady might be, and for months the face was credited to various noted beauties, who were flattered as they read glowing descriptions of themselves, and, being birds of society, rather liked the prominence than otherwise.

Foreighteen months a Philadelphia Record reporter has been devoting his spare moments to tracing out the original of the Goddess, and, although balked and obstructed at every turn by those who knew the real facts, he is enabled this morning to drag before the public the backward young lady whose profile was made the basis of the figure shown on the face of the coin:

In the early part of 1876 the Treasury Department opened communications with the Royal Mint of England for the purpose of procuring the services of an expert designer and engraver, whom it was desired should come to this country and take a position in the Philadelphia Mint. As a result of these negotiations a clever young man named Morgan was sent over here. He engaged accommodations with a very estimable lady, Mrs. Eckfelt, on Mount Vernon street, above Sixteenth. He announced his business as being employed by the Treasury Department, and stated that he was engaged to make a design for a new dollar, and immediately proceeded to turn his apartment into a workshop. At the same time Mr. Morgan was engaged in his labors to produce something which would startle the country, Mr. Barber, the Chief Designer at the Mint here, was hard at work upon the same subject. For weeks and months Mr. Morgan toiled on, failing to produce a design which was satisfactory to himself. His attention at first was given to the reverse side, and eagles in various attitudes appeared, but at last he designed a copy of the great American bird which pleased him. This was not the one which appears on the coin now, but was larger, and its wings were longer. An afterthought occurred, when the wings were clipped, the bird reduced in size, and the one which holds a position on the reverse side of the dollar of the daddies was adopted as the proper design.

While engaged in his labors, Mr. Morgan visited the Academy of Fine Arts for the purpose of brightening up his ideas studying American art. He was acquainted with the English and the Continental schools but, as his work was to be Americanized, he desired to make it thoroughly so. He made the acquaintance of Mr. Thomas Eakins, an artist of no little reputation, and this soon ripened into a warm friendship. Their interests being identical, to Mr. Eakins was communicated many of the thoughts of the foreign artist, regarding the work he had on hand. Mr. Morgan desired to present as the principal figure on the coin a representative head of the American female beauty. His first inclination was to make a fanciful head of a Goddess of Liberty or something of the sort, which would be pleasing in its appearance and yet have no real significance. A couple of designs up to the expectations of the artist. Then it was determined that the head should be the representation of some living American girl, who should sit while the artist sketched her features. But where to procure such a lady was a question which bothered Mr. Morgan. He examined the countenance of the young women who make it their business to pose as models for the artists at the Academy, and among the large number he could find none who suited his purposes. He went to the Womans' School of Design, but in all the sketchings and casts there examined he could find nothing which accorded with his views. Then the services of his new-found friend, Mr. Eakins, were called in, and that gentleman induced a young lady friend of the family to sit as the model for Mr. Morgan. This lady is the one whose face is now stamped on the coin of the country, and whose identity therefore becomes a matter of historical record.

The posings took place at the residence of Mr. Eakins, on Mount Vernon street, below Eighteenth, where the lady was initiated into the difficulties and mysteries of art. It was a question for a long time as to just what form the head and its ornamentation should consist of. Large caps were made to represent the Goddess of Liberty and all sorts of things. The position was rather trying to a young lady who had never sat before. The designer is represented to have said that the profile of the miss was "the most perfect he had ever seen in England or this country." After four or five sittings, tracings sufficient to proceed with the work had been secured, and Mr. Morgan dismissed his model. After this the designer took his various sketches and from them wrought out the head which is the prominent figure on the front of the dollar of the daddies.

The person who is the subject of this sketch and whose features form the groundwork for the design on the coin, is a very estimable and modest young lady. Her name is Miss Anna W. Williams, and she resides with her mother and aunt at No. 1023 Spring Garden street, Philadelphia, where the family has lived for a number of years. It did not occur to her at the time of the sittings that she would become historically famous, and had such a thought ever crossed her mind the designer of the dollar would have been compelled to seek elsewhere for a subject. Miss Williams is a blonde and of very fair complexion. By many she is regarded as pretty. She is slightly below the average height and of good figure. It would be impossible to recognize her by the head as it appears on the dollar, because there are numerous artistic changes, made to suit the eye of the designer. This is particularly the case with the full-rounded chin, which is said by those who know to resemble that of the wife Mr. Morgan. The Grecian nose and the delicate lips are those of Miss Williams, and this characteristic is strongly marked in other members of the Williams family. Of course the blousy hair, the folded liberty cap and the other ornamentations are the addenda of the artist, and made to set off the figure so that it would appear to better advantage.

Miss Williams is employed as a teacher in the Girl's School, No. 2, at the House of Refuge, where she has been for the past two years. She is regarded with high favor at the institution, and is considered one of the most capable imparters of knowledge in the large staff. She is modest and retiring in manner, and with true womanly instinct shrinks from the prominence into which her face and name are brought.

The Greatest Railroad.

"The greatest railroad in this country, if not of the world," was the verdict of Charles Francis Adams, Jr., when, at a complimentary dinner to the present manager of the Hoosac tunnel, he referred to the Pennsylvania. Some letters from a special correspondent frouf Altoona have lately justified the emphatic eulogy of the ex-commissioner. What Mr. Adams found to excite his admiration is the outcome of a more than wise policy. During the period of commercial depression, which has not yet come to an end, the Pennsylvania Railroad pursued a policy diametrically opposite to that of its rivals and the majority of American railroads. It boldly passed its dividends that money might be expended on track improvements, on new experiments in the interest of economy, in perfecting all branches of its service. Other railroads kept the bill of repairs almost below what a proper regard for safety demanded, in order that the customary dividends might not fail. The era of prosperity is to-day returning, and to meet it in all its heavy requirement of transportation, the Pa. railroad is magificently equipped. Rival corporations, having worked their rolling stock to the last limits, will require, in order to meet the demands that will be made upon them, heavy and paralyzing outlays for new cars, tracks, bridges and engines. And in this juncture the wisdom of another side of Pennsylvania policy becomes discernible, the policy of leased lines. For the day has passed when traffic can pe controlled by the ownership of cars; a freight car costs but $400. Eventually, therefore, the business will be in the hands of those who have had the foresight to become the owners of the outlets, and who have the first-class facilities wherewith to transact it. To come in contact with such a policy, to watch the ripening of such ideas, demonstrates that there is something very vital about the Pennsylvania Railroad. To mingle with its governing men is like the effect of a salt breeze. It is invigorating. It lifts one up from the petty plane of "rates and fares" to an existence wherein the principles are boldly progressive and the projects satisfyingly comprehensive. You see railroad science at its best, and note the solving of problems of more than Pennsylvania importance. Lacking, too, such a spirit in New England, it is at least gratifying that it can be found in the country, and that, for superiority in this direction, it is not necessary to cross to the Old World.—Boston Herald.

An Elmira girl took a loaded pistol and shot a comrade, after the fashion of Miss Lillie Duer, of Maryland. Her victim is not yet dead, but it might be well for the Elmira girl to prepare for emergencies by getting together $500, which is now looked on as the standard price for killing girls.

A Sportman's Outfit.

The Boston Globe, in a recent issue, says: A singular explosion occurred at the depot of the Boston & Providence railroad at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and the escape from fatal results to two human lives was almost miraculous. John Coles, a transit express messenger, called for a trunk at the inner baggage room. Presenting the check, the baggage master showed him the trunk, and Coles took hold of it by the hadle, and was in the act of dragging it to the wagon when an explosion which resembled the discharge of a cannon, took place, reverberating through the train house and causing a momentary panic among the passengers. Coles was blown into the air a distance of 20 feet, and alighted upon terra firma with only the strap of the trunk in his hand. A little boy who was passing at the time was blown across the street, being picked up insensible. A crowd of people soon gathered, and investigation showed that there was nothing but small pieces left of the trunk, which had been filled with gunpowder, shot, cartridges and other sporting material, including a double barreled shot gun valued at $200. The cause of the explosion is supposed to be the ignition of the powder or the discharge of a cartridge. Coles had his eyebrows burned off and face blackened, but otherwise escaped injury. The boy recovered consciousness, and was found not to be injured. It is impossible to ascertain to whom the trunk belongs, as there is not anything left to identify the owner, but undoubtedly this publication or the delay in the arrival of his trunk will cause him to make himself known. A valise near the trunk was blewn to pieces. The shot gun fell to the ground, but is rendered valueless. The general impression at the first sound of the accident was that a locomotive had burst.

DYSPEPSIA. DYSPEPSIA. DYSPEPSIA.
Dyspepsia is the most perplexing of all human ailments. Its symptoms are almost infinite in their variety, and the forlorn and despondent victims of the disease often fancy themselves the prey, in turn, of every known malady. This is due, in part to the close sympathy which exists between the stomach and brain, and in part, also, to the fact that any disturbance of the digestive function necessarily disorders the liver, the bowels and the nervous system, and effects, to some extent, the quality of the blood.
E. F. Kunkel's Bitter Wine of Iron is a sure cure. This is not a new preparation, to be tried and found wanting; it has been prescribed for many years in the practice of eminent physicians with unparalelled success; it is not expected to cure all the diseases to which the human family is subject, but is warranted to cure Dyspepsia in its most obstinate form. Kunkel's Bitter Wine of Iron never fails to cure. Symptoms of Dyspepsia are loss of appetite, wind and rising of food, dryness of the mouth, heartburn, distension of the stomach and bowels, constipation, headache, dizziness, sleeplessness, and low spirits. Try the great remedy and be convinced of its merits. Get the genuine. Take only Kunkel's which is put up only in $1 bottles. Depot, 259 North Ninth St., Philadelphia. Advice by mail free, by sending 3 cent stamp. Try one bottle of Kunkel's Iron and be convinced of its merits. Sold by druggists and storekeepers everywhere.

SELECT LIST
—OF—
LOCAL NEWSPAPERS

Many persons suppose this list to be composed of Cheap, low-priced newspapers. The fact is quite otherwise. The Catalogue states exactly what the papers are. When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST paper in the place. When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. When printed in roman letters it is neither the best nor the only paper, but is usually a very good one, notwithstanding. The list gives the population of every town, and the circulation of every paper. It is not a CO-OPERATIVE LIST. It is not a CHEAP LIST. At the foot of the catalogue or each State the important towns which are not covered by the list are enumerated. It is an HONEST LIST. The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publisher's schedule. The price for one inch four weeks in the entire list is $555. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $3,136 55. The list includes 970 newspapers, of which 163 are issued daily and 807 weekly. They are located in 825 different cities and towns, of which 22 are State Capitals, 328 places of over 5,000 population, and 444 County Seats. Lists sent on application. Address GEO. P. Get Registered.

It is now time that every Republican voter in Centre county should examine the Assessor's book and see that he is assessed and registered, according to law. The Vigilant Committees should also see that every indifferent or negligent voter in our party is assessed and registered on or before September 4, 1879, which is the last day of registration this year. State or county tax must be paid on or before October 4, 1879, to entitle a man to vote at the November election.

Additional Local Matters.

—There has been a great deal of sickness in town during the past week.

—The heavy rain on Monday filled up cisterns and brightened things up generally.

—Mr. R. W. Mulhollan, of Altoona, was at home on Sunday, visiting his parents and friends.

—The Garman House, the "old reliable," is crowded, as usual, with people who are attending court.

—The Bush House, it should be remembered, offers special rates to jurors and others in town attending court.

—The new switch-board for the telephone service, which arrived from Boston last week, has been set up and put in operation.

—Friday, September 5th, is the last day for registration. Republican voters, don't forget this, and see that your names are on the list.

—Tracy Turneville, Chairman of the People's Tribute Wreath to Lord Beaconsfield, accidentally met the Premier for the first time, in a street in London, and shook hands with him! Still he is not happy. He demands justice from his Lordship. Justice of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and Justice of the Queen, or he will take the stump and thunder from a hundred platforms. And if he had been in Bellefonte and had tested Sechler's groceries, he would willingly take the stump and proclaim from a hundred platforms the merits of the goods to be found at this establishment. The best and purest groceries that money can buy can always be had at the famous grocery of Sechler & Co.

Bellefonte Academy.

THE YOUNG LADIES' SCHOOL

will be opened for the fall session on Wednesday, September 3d., under the charge of Mrs. W. W. Robinson, a lady of liberal culture, large and varied experience, and Christian refinement. Mrs. Robinson formerly had charge of a young ladies' seminary in Cincinnati, and more recently has had a very sucessful experience in the Female Seminary at Bridgeton, N. J. In addition to her other classes, she will give instruction in drawing to young ladies of Bellefonte. In this department she has had successful experience. She brings with her the highest testimonials as to her fitness for her work from those who know her well.

THE YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S SCHOOL

will open on Thursday, Sept. 4th. The Principal has secured as classical teacher and first assistant, Mr. Chas. Heebner, a graduate of Lafayette College, of high standing, having taken three of the prizes of his class, one of them being the prize in classics. He has also been very successful in preparing boys for admission into Yale College. He is a young man of rare ability, fine scholarship, and comes to us highly recommended.

THE PRIMARY SCHOOL

will open on Wednesday, September 3d, under the care of Mrs. Ogden, who is already so well and so favorably known among us.

A REGULAR COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT will be opened in the boys' school for the young men of Centre county. The Principal will give instruction in Commercial Arithmetic and Bookkeeping, and Professor Charles Bauer, who is already well known among us as a successful teacher of penmanship, will take the entire charge of the writing department without extra expense to the pupil.

Thus, with a full corps of competent and successful teachers, we purpose to furnish all needed instruction to meet the intellectual wants of the youth of Bellefonte and Centre county, and to have Bellefonte Academy do more for the credit of its friends and patrons in the future than it has done in the past. What we ask from those who take a pride in their own institution is a cordial sympathy and a liberal support in return.

Young men living at a distance from the school can rent rooms in the town and board themselves at very reasonable prices.

J. P. HUGHES,
33-2t Principal.

Patriotic Scranton.

Coup's circus and menagerie gave an entertainment in Scranton during the early part of this month, and in arranging the flags on the tent, whether intentionally or otherwise, the British flag was hung higher than the American flag. Mayor Powderly, upon hearing of it, promptly sent the following note to Mr. Coup:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, SCRANTON,
August 4, 1879.

W. C. COUP, ESQ.—Dear Sir: This morning in the arrangement of flags over your pavillion the British flag was the highest. If you raise the flags after the rain ceases, you will take the precaution to place the American flag in its proper position, viz, above all others, for no flag can float above it in this city. Very respect'y yours,

T. V. POWDERLY, Mayor.

In the evening there was a change made, and the stars and stripes floated above all others.

—Visitors to the State Fair to be held in Philadelphia from the 8th to the 20th of September, will find at the St. Cloud Hotel on Arch St., above Seventh, every comfort and convenience known to modern hotels. An art of neatness and cleanliness is everywhere visible, while the most obliging and attentive servants administer to, and in many cases anticipate your wants. The sleeping rooms are large, comfortable and elegantly furnished, while the table is unsurpassed. Street cars running both ways past the door, render not only the Permanent Exhibition, where the fair is to be held, but all places of amusement and interest conveniently accessible. Messrs. G. W. Mullin & Co., by personal attention, will endeavor to make guests feel at home and comfortable in every particular. The terms are only $2.50 per day.

—Those who come to Bellefonte to to attend court cannot do better than to stop at the Bush House. First-class accommodations and table unsurpassed.

—E. C. Humes, Esq., is adding a new porch to his residence on Allegheny street, which will greatly improve the appearance of that property.

—We are informed that Mrs. Geo. Spering, wife of 'Squire Spering, of Howard, died very suddenly on Saturday night.

K. Hester, aged fifty, of St. Petersburg, Pa., was run over and killed Friday at Pittston, while walking on the Coal Company's track.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Philadelphia Correspondence.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22, 1879.

The coming State Fair, to be held in this city, beginning September 8th, and closing Saturday, Sept. 20th, promises to be a grand success in all its departments. The Permanent Exhibition building, which has been the main topic of discussion for the past three weeks, through an unjust action on the part of the Park Commission, in trying to compel the company to tear it down, remove and wipe it from the memories of the people, has wounded the hearts of many a lover of liberty througnout our land, and more especially the true heroes of the Keystone.

The building has been repaired inside and out, for the fair; everything is in ample convenience to meet the reqnirements. The best stalls and pens for horses and swine, are in readiness, and for horticultural and floral culture displays the arrangements are all that can be desired. As for poultry, this department is a specialty. The exhibitors in this department can, upon application to the secretary, corner 10th and Chestnut streets, be furnished with blank forms for entry. During the exhibition the birds, etc., will be under the care of of an experienced assistant, who will see that they are regulary fed and watered. This will be a great relief to the exhibitors. If desired, the proper officers will see that the birds are returned by the same route as desired, provided that the officers are given timely notification. Entries and competition free; books close on September 2d. The amount of premiums is $15,000, and the cash prizes for live stock about $9,000. The premiums for fruits, flowers, farm and dairy produce, tools, machinery and manufactured goods, will be liberal, besides a large number of elegant and valuable gold, silver and bronze medals, valued at more than $15,000. There will be night and day police always on the alert to protect the property of all the contributors. All in all, the fair is anticipated as going to be one of the largest, grandest and most varied that has ever been held by any State society, and will be second to the ever-memorable world's fair of 1876. There is no reason why all should not be interested in this second great fair for Pennsylvania, and the city of brotherly love. Those who had the pleasure, as well as the means, to visit the Centennial in '76, will have its many happy and joyful recollections brought fresh to their memory, and to those who never visited the glorious event of 1876, I would heartily insist upon their going to this fair. They will never regret the money invested in the trip. Excursion tickets will be furnished by all railroads centreing at Philadelphia, and all articles for exhibition carried on liberal terms.

The main building to-day, not including the Agricultural Society, exhibits enough to attract and interest the visitor for weeks. The fair lasting two weeks, affords the visitor ample time to visit other places of interest, as the Zoological Garden, Navy Yard, U. S. Mint, Masonic Temple, Girard College, Academy of Fine Arts, and of Natural Science, and Independence Hall, with its many objects of national interest. The grave of our noble hero and statesman, Franklin, whose life you are all familiar with, is looked upon with deep interest. Many other points of interest could be mentioned, but I will not take up the space. But one important feature which must not be omitted, as it is of great importance to the people attending the fair from the country, and especially from Centre county, many of whom we shall be happy to see at that time: It is at the Columbia House, on North Broad street, above Arch, and its cheap rates and good accommodations. The table furnished with the best the market affords, and a homelike greeting to all. Rooms can be engaged at any time. The stranger takes the Market street cars at Twenthird and Market, Pennsylvania depot, rides to public buildings, walks one square north on Broad to 111 and 113, and finds himself at Columbia.

WASHINGTON.

Special Correspondent.

Aug. 21, 1879.

Prof. Greever, of Howard University, goes North to-day by invitation to attend the Social Congress. The University in which the Professor is an honored teacher receives hardly the support it should from benevolent people in the North, but it is surely, though slowly, gaining strength, and gives promise of prominence among the educational institutions of the country. There should be and I doubt not will be a successful effort made in due time to give the colored men the same opportunities for improvement at this school that others have in other institutions. Something is being done. Much more should be done.

In the purchase of silver yesterday by Government it appeared that the prices demanded were higher at San Francisco than in London, and all San Francisco bids were therefore declined. The cause of this is a great demand from China, to be supplied from California. Secretary Sherman said before leaving here the other day that he believed this condition of things was permanent. It does not require the eye of a prophet to see that this is only an incident in the great change in the world's commerce. Westward the Star of the Empire takes its way.

Mr. Tilden, if his friends are to be believed, wishes to be the Democratic and "Reform" candidate for Governor of New York. If he wishes to be he will be, but the voters of the State will bury him under such an adverse vote as never was thrown before.

Secretary Evarts is wise in seeing that no haste is made in selecting a Minister to England. Such questions as those of the fisheries and the relations of silver to gold in the coinage of the world require the best ability we have. I doubt not that the right man will be sent.

They have now killed the man Dixon, in Yazoo county, Miss. Dixon was one of the original bulldozers in that section, and his neighbors presented him with a watch and other tokens of gratitude for his success in extinguishing Republican voters. This year he attempted to head an "Independent" movement in Yazoo county, was himself bulldozed, and retired from the canvass, but afterwards returned to it and was killed, as above stated. It may be said in this case that the man deserved all that he received, for it was what he had meted out to others. But what kind of civilization have they in solidly Democratic Yazoo county.

PHIL.

FRICO'S FLURRY.

NOTORIOUS CLERGYMAN SHOT.

Kearney Saves the City from Bloodshed and Mob Rule.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 24.—On Friday night Rev. I. S. Kalloch, formerly of Boston, defended himself against charges of immorality in the presence of an immense meeting of his friends and admirers. He declared that the charges printed in the newspapers were trumped up by two infamous scoundrels named Charles and Michael De Young. Yesterday morning Charles De Young drove in a covered coupe to the front of the private entrance of the Metropolitan Temple, where Mr. Kalloch has his study and rooms, and sent a messenger boy asking him to come out. Mr. Kalloch immediately appeared on the sidewalk, when De Young shot him in the breast. Mr. Kalloch turned to retreat within doors, when De Young shot him in the back. Mr. Kalloch is believed to be mortally wounded. A crowd immediately seized the carriage in which De Young was, turned it over and dragged him out. He was dreadfully kicked and bruised, and would no doubt have been killed on the spot had not an unusual number of policemen come suddenly to the rescue and hurried him to jail.

Word of the hostile meeting of the editor and the clergyman flew over the city and caused the wildest excitement. The workingmen gathered in knots, and with great unanimity declared that the Chronicle office should be torn out, and that the Messrs. De Young should be hanged. A mass meeting was ordered on the sand lots, and the presidents of the ward societies assembled for consultation in secret. Over ten thousand people gathered in an hour on the sand lots, and they were clamoring for vengeance, when several prominent leaders took the rude stand that had been hastily erected, and endeavored to call the meeting to order. At last one of them made himself heard, and he began by counselling peace and patience. He was drowned with jeers and groans from the crowd. Another well-known leader obtained the attention of the masses, and declared that nothing could be done until Dennis Kearney arrived. He said he was on his way down from Vallejo, and would arrive at dusk. This pacified the crowd enough to get them to listen to speeches. Kearney came in the evening and addressed the vast throng, which had grown to about 30,000 souls. He said that ten days hence the workingmen would rule the city according to the act of Assembly, and although he thought this foul murder ought to be instantly avenged, he would not have blood shed now, because it would prove that the humbler classes were incompetent to govern themselves, much less the city. He wanted to win the election first, and then by legal means put down the hounds who have misruled it, and who go pistol in hand to avenge their supposed wrongs. The speech had a most pacific effect, and San Francisco was spared a bloody riot, if not total destruction.

The brothers De Young were both in jail. It was guarded by a large force of armed police and several companies of militia. All of the military companies were under arms, and the members of the Grand Army of the Republic were summoned to duty by General Macomb. Had there been a riot, the slaughter would have been very great. So the value of Dennis Kearney's speech was extraordinary.

Rev. I. S. Kalloch was in 1857 the pastor of a Baptist congregation in Tremont Temple, Boston. He was very popular, but was charged with immoral conduct with a Mrs. Stein, of Brattleboro, Vermont, at a hotel in Cambridge, Massachusetts. The jury in the case disagreed, but the people thought him guilty, and he was obliged to leave. He went to Kansas, and tried preaching, politics, and farming, but failed at everything. Some years ago he settled at San Francisco, and after preaching strange doctrines to great crowds of people, he again entered the political arena as workingmen's candidate for Mayor.

Charles and H. M. De Young are natives of New Orleans, and proprietors and editors of the Chronicle. They have been in California for thirty years nearly, and are self-made men—sprightly and enterprising journalists. Mr. Charles De Young is an independent editor, but has never let his passion get the better of his judgment before to such an extent as at present. He had a running pistol fight with one Naphthaly, who had traduced him, and with Judge Lake who had took umbrage at an article written by De Young. In these affairs no one was hurt. Mr. De Young piques himself on his honorable desent from an excellent French ancestry, and upon his moral career in San Francisco, and when Kalloch threatened to revive Naphthaly's scandal, it exasperated him beyond measure. He told Kalloch he would shoot him if he dared to read the article from Naphthaly's journal, and he kept his word.

The brothers De Young were interviewed early this morning. Charles would say nothing, except that the published accounts of the affair were correct. M. H. De Young, in answer to a remark of the reporter that it was a bad state of affairs, replied that it might have been expected. "Mr. Kalloch," he said, "might have known that he could not go on to a public platform and traduce our mother and family without bitter retribution, following close upon the heels of vilification. There was no law that would reach the matter." He knew that he took his life in his hands when he spoke as he did.

"But," said the reporter, "the workingmen, whose fight this seems to have become, claim that he was justified in thus abusing your family, after the Chronicle had rolled back the curtain from his father's history—and an old man who has been dead these thirty years."

"That," replied De Young, "was unpardonable; but I will say, in justice to my brother and myself, that that statement came as a dispatch from Boston. It arrived at about half past one o'clock in the morning, when both my brother and myself were away—he at a political conference, and I elsewhere. Even our news editor scarcely read the matter as it came in, but once published, we determined to stand by it without a retraction. No matter how excited the public is now, they will take a calmer view of the matter when they come to reflect that my brother simply did what any man would do who had a spark of manhood about him."

The Chronicle, Mr. De Young's paper, closes an editorial article on the affair with these words: "No human being, with the natural instincts which belongs to us all as sons, brothers and husbands, can be expected, without special grace from on High, to hear those who are nearest and dearest to him coarsely aspersed and vilified before the public without experiencing an overwhelming impulse to resent the outrage. Let those who are disposed to indulge in harsh judgment in this case make it their own. Let them consider what they would themselves have been compelled to do had their own mothers and sisters been subjected to brutal insult before a public assemblage."

The city has been perfectly quiet all day. The police in full force are on duty, and the troops are under arms, with several Katling guns and a battery of light artillery ready for use. There has been an immense but orderly throng about the Metropolitain Temple all day and this evening, where Kalloch lies in a critical condition, although his physicians think his recovery is possible.

Kearney addressed another meeting on the sand lots this evening, advising peace and order and the making of capital out of the situation. J. M. Calloch, son of the wounded man, also made an address, advising moderation, which had a great effect. He and Kearney both said that Kalloch had been offered $30,000 to withdraw in favor of the "Honorable Bilks'" candidate for Mayor.

Wheat Culture.

The crack farmers of our town having manifested an increased interest in wheat culture, we feel it our duty to publish all the information that comes before us, which may add to the general public interest on this subject. Below our readers will find a report written by Hon. W. W. Reed, of Erie, Pa., to the State Board of Agriculture, on "Do Fertilizers Pay," which is worthy the careful consideration of every Centre county farmer.

As there is considerable difference of opinion as to whether there is any profit in using fertilizers, I state the results of some experiments that I have made, which may possibly be of interest to farmers.

I sowed 14.49 acres with Lancaster red wheat last fall, and used salt, guano, phosphate, bone dust and ground limestone on different sections, leaving 3.83 acres with no fertilizers except a little slacked lime that was intended to make that portion of the field equal in fertility to the other sections before using the fertilizers on them. The result was as follows:

Section one contained 2.28 acres, and had one barrel of salt per acre, costing $1 per acre, sown over the ground after the wheat was drilled in. This yielded 29.6 bushels per acre.

Section two contained 2.09 acres, and had 400 pounds guano drilled in with the wheat, costing $4.50 per acre. This yielded 29.3 bushels per acre.

Section three contained 2.12 acres, and had 810 pounds of phosphate drilled in with the wheat, costing $7.28 per acre. This yielded 37.5 bushels per acre.

Section four contained 2.11 acres, and had 590 pounds of bone dust drilled in with the wheat, costing $5.16 per acre. This yielded 37.7 bushels per acre.

Section five contained 2.06 acres, and had 800 pounds of ground lime stone drilled in with the wheat, costing $1.20 per acre. This yielded 37.7 bushels per acre.

Section six contained 3.83 acres, and had a little slacked lime scattered over it, intended to make it equal in fertility to the other sections before they were fertilized. This yielded 14.3 bushels per acre.

All the above quantities are thresher's measure, and, as the wheat weighs 65 pounds to the bushel, the actual quantity will be from 10 to 15 per cent. more. Assuming that the average of the field without fertilizers would have been twenty bushels per acre (which is 5.7 bushels per acre more than the yield of the portion not fertilized,) the profit from the use of fertilizers (calling the wheat worth $1 per bushel) is as follows.

For salt, 2.28 acres, at $8.60 per acre profit,	$19.61
For guano, 2.09 acres, at $4.80 per acre profit	10.03
For phosphate, 2.12 acres, at $10.22 per acre profit	21.66
For bone dust, 2.11 acres, at $12.54 per acre profit	26.46
For ground lime stone, 2.06 acres, at $14.50 per acre profit	29.87
Total profit from fert'zrs on 10.66 acr's,	$107.63

This ground was carefully measured and staked off, and the different sections harvested and threshed separately, and every precaution taken to secure accurate results. The field is a clay soil, mixed with some gravel, and has been thoroughly under drained. It was sown to barly the spring before the wheat was sown, and yielded eighteen bushels per acre. Before the wheat was harvested, the sections upon which salt and guano were used looked equally as well as those sections treated with phosphate, bone dust and ground lime stone; and, if they had not been threshed separately, it would not have been possible, from the appearance of the wheat, to determine which was the best. This fact has convinced me that the only way to arrive at accurate results is to thresh separately, as in this case. Sections yielding thirty seven bushels per acre, looked no better than those yielding twenty-nine bushels per acre. I think it is not improbable that fertilizers have been condemned as useless, in many cases, when, if the grain had been threshed separately, they would have shown favorable results.

In this case, the ground limestone proved to be the most economical fertilizer, showing a profit over bone dust of $1.96 per acre; over phosphate, of $4.28 per acre; over guano, of $9.70 per acre, and over salt of $5.90 per acre. I am using the ground limestone on about seventy acres of wheat this fall, and hope I may not have occasion to change the opinion formed from the foregoing tests, that, in proportion to cost, it is the best fertilizer for wheat. The field, on which the above tests were made, is being again sown to wheat, with a uniform dressing of one hundred pounds of bone dust and three hundred pounds of ground limestone to the acre, and will be again harvested and threshed separately, to ascertain the the yield of the different sections the second year.

Dakota Territory.

A 20,000 Acre Wheat Field.

A correspondent of the Chicago Journal, writing from Bismarck, Dakota Territory, on the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad, has been looking at the new county, which will interest every farmer. He writes as follows: But whatever may be the speculations as to the climatology of this region—a topic which has not yet been quite mastered by any of those who have attempted to discuss it—the practical facts have been established that the region along the line of the Northern Pacific road will not only produce good grain, but that it is exceptionally well adapted for that purpose. Good crops of wheat and oats have been produced all a ong the line from the Red River valley to the Missouri; and in the yield per acre, as well as in the quality of grain, the results have been all that could be desired. This year will probably be the most successful one in the history of the region, and the result, so far as it can be determined, will powerfully reinforce the experience of other years. In the vicinity of Bismarck, oats are apparently the favorite crop, on account of the fine local market for Government purposes, and for the subsistance of teams used for the 2,000 freight wagons employed in the carrying trade between Bismarck and the Black Hills and other points. A good local market is thus furnished, and oats here are worth from 50 to 60 cents per bushel. On the Stark farm, a few miles from this place—the scene of a famous Indian battle, in 1862, between General Sibley and the Indians who perpetrated the Indian massacres in Minnesota that year—your correspondent saw an elegant field of oats, 500 acres in extent, of which the yield is estimated at fifty bushels to the acre. There is another smaller field near by, the yield of which, it is thought, will reach seventy bushels to the acre. On the Steele farm of over 6,000 acres, forty miles east of Bismarck, we saw a still finer 500 acre oat field, the yield of which is expected to reach seventy bushels per acre—worth on the track 45 cents per bushel. Fifteen thousand dollars is not a bad result from a single grain patch! Potatoes are also largely raised here for the frontier market, and pay a fine profit. The completion of a flouring mill at this place, now nearly ready for the machinery, will furnish a home market for wheat, and will doubtless lead to the cultivation of this crop after this year.

Farther east, away from the immediate market at Bismarck, wheat is the principal crop. The average yield this year is placed by the most careful estimates at from 20 to 27 bushels per acre. The first wheat crop raised was in 1874, when the entire product for the whole length of the line was but 250,000 bushels. This year a single county (Cass Co.) is expected to produce 1,640,000 bushels, estimating but twenty bushels to the acre; and the entire product of the country along the line of the Northern Pacific will probably not be less than 6,500,000 bushels, based upon an acreage of 325,000. The wheat will be worth about 90 cents per bushel at any point upon the railroad, as the rate of transportation is uniform upon the whole line. Much of the wheat goes to Duluth, where it is worth about the same as at Chicago; the wheat from this section being especially in demand, on account of its fine quality, for grading up No. 2 wheat. A good deal of wheat goes to St. Paul and Minneapolis this year; that city alone will manufacture 10,000 barrels of flour per day, or 3,000,000 barrels per year. Such is the surprising development of this new and yet almost unknown wheat country, and such are the facilities for disposing of its products. The immense mills at Minneapolis are the corollary of the vast wheat fields of the new Northwest, and the two agencies supplement and reinforce each other.

To take the woody taste out of a wooden pail, fill the pail with boiling hot water; let it remain until cold, then empty it and dissolve some soda in luke warm water, adding a little lime to it, and wash the inside well with the solution; after that, scald with hot water and rinse thoroughly.

To keep a copper tea kettle bright, buy five cents' worth of oxalic acid, and put it in a bottle and fill with cold water; when dissolved, rub the kettle with a cloth dipped in the solution. Elbow grease is essential to make the kettle shine, and the kettle must be cold when cleaned.

Fresh damage to the crops in Hungary and Galicia are reported. Hungary is a great wheat growing country. The prospect is that the European demand for American breadstuffs will be greater than ever before.

Culture of the Cherry.

There are very few persons in the world who are not fond of our improved cherries. They are really a most desirable fruit, and wholesome when not indulged in too extravagantly. But there is no crop so uncertain. There are but two varieties that are reliable—the Early Richmond and Kentish, both of the same family, and really the most valuable of them all for culinary purposes. They are excellent in pies and puddings, to make "bounce," to "preserve," or to dry for winter use, while nearly all the rest are used as a desert fresh from the trees. But for this purpose they are justly prized. A full tree of cherries is a beautiful sight when of the large varieties, but it is enjoyed only once in four or five years in this section.

One peculiarity in regard to the cherry is its whimsical behavior. The present season from some half dozen trees we did not obtain half a dozen pounds; while upon some of the trees in the immediate neighborhood there were full crops of large and beautiful fruit. Formerly we succeeded with the cherry regularly, while frequently all around us there were very few. We had six trees, twenty years old, of different varieties, standing within from 20 to 30 feet of each other, in full bearing and to all appearance in perfect health through the summer, all of which died during one autumn, without any apparent cause, and without, so far as we could learn, a precedent. We believe that the cherry does better in grass lands where it will not have its roots disturbed or its trunk damaged by the swingletree of the plow in cultivation than in constantly cropped land.

Of Interest to Grape-Vine Growers.

As an item of agricultural interest it may be noted that it has been asserted by French writers, that the Eucalyptus is a remedy for phylloxera; that Eucalyptus trees growing near the grape-vines protect the vines from the ravages of this parasite. Experiments have also been made with the essence of the drug upon the diseased vines by Abbe Rolland, in the manner of inoculation, and with such success that he has pronounced it, after a trial of two years of its virtues, "an infallible remedy." He makes a broad incision through the bark at the neck of the vine, and into this put a few drops of the essence, or rubs it over the cut surface with a camel's hair brush. The result is, as he says, that in three or four days the parasites are destroyed, but the vine remains uninjured. The incision may be made in any other part of the bark, but the desirable result is most speedily obtained by making it as near the roots as possible. An essence of the genuine plant should however be used, there being many counterfeit and adulterated preparations in the market at present.

Although it may be regarded as in the line of gratuitous advertising which we certainly shall not encourage, we think it will be doing a general service to grape-growers to say, that Dr. William Armstrong, No. 644 North Twelfth street, this city, can supply the genuine article in any required quantity. It ought to be given a trial, which would soon establish the fact of its merit or demerit.

Household Hints.

Turpentine will remove ink from white woodwork.

To soften the hard, dry putty on the windows, wet it with muriatic acid.

Water can be purified in a cistern by dropping in a large piece of common charcoal.

Chicken for salad is nicer cut with a knife than chopped in a bowl, and the celery should always be cut with a knife.

A bit of isinglass dissolved in gin or boiled in spirits of wine will make strong cement for broken glass, china and sea shells.

It is said that if the real ivory handles of knives get stained, they may be cleaned by using a paste made of salvolatile, prepared chalk and oil; rub the paste on the ivory with a feather; when dry add more, and having left the whole to become thoroughly dry, rub it off.

Cannibalism.

Russian merchants recently returned from the interior of China to St. Petersburg have furnished details respecting the famine which has for some time raged throughout certain provinces of the Celestial empire. They depose to having seen people die in the streets of many towns and villages from sheer starvation, and state not only that anthropophagy is practiced upon the bodies of the dead, but that famished men attack the living and prey upon them with the utmost ferocity. One of them alleges that he was present at the examination of a mendicant who had been arrested for some petty theft, and in whose professional wallet the mangled remains of an infant were discovered. This man confessed to the magistrate that for some time previous to this he had lived upon the fresh flesh of human beings, as he could not surmount his antipathy to that of dead bodies. A very appalling case which came under the notice of a Russian merchant was that of a young man man who had persuaded his father to assist him in murdering and subsequently eating a girl to whom he was betrothed. Men have been executed for killing and eating their children, and sons have slain their parents in order to satisfy the pangs of hunger. In some of the northern districts, whole villages stand empty, their inhabitants having one and all perished for want of food.

A Talk with Gen. R. E. Lee.

His Opinion of Gen. Grant.

The Cincinnati Commercial prints a long story by the ex-Chaplain of an Ohio Regiment, detailing his impressions received in an interview held with the late Gen. Robt. E. Lee at the time Sherman's army was marching through Richmond. We quote from it as follows:

"I conversed with him upon a variety of subjects, upon all of which he expressed opinions. He was very positive in his convictions, and seemed to have weighed every sentence with studied care. The telegraph wires having recently announced the news of Lincoln's assassination, this naturally was the first subject of conversation. In speaking of the martyred President, he said: 'The death of that eminent citizen has filled me with horror. If there were blemishes in his character, his life exibited some splendid and rare virtues. He was one of the most extraordidary men that ever lived in our country. His heart was grand and large. He was constitutionally pensive. Had he been spared, the South would be treated with honorable propriety and with a gallant generosity; good will and friendliness would have marked his treatment of the South.' He pronounced Booth 'a cowardly ruffian,' that all the tragic machinery of the globe, that all the instruments of civil rage could not produce so fine a demon; that the soldiers of the Southern army and the people could regard the murder of Lincoln not only as a crime against our Christian civilization and our common humanity, but that his loss at this moment was a terrible blow to the vanquished, who would have to bear the responsibility of the cruel, cold-blooded assassination; that the spirit of clemency, moderation and of conciliation displayed by the President were virtues not to be found in his successor. 'Let the avenger's arms,' he continued to say, with eyes moistened with tears, 'fall upon the guilty. Should this be the course adopted by the authorities at Washington, their greatest victory is yet before them; that a more shining page in their annals would be written, and that the sublimest example of magnanimity and self-government would be set.

"To my question, 'Do you think the rebellion is ended?' he replied very emphatically: "Yes, sir; and had it not been for the politicians, it never would have been commenced.' The politicians to whom he referred were Davis, Yancey, Breckinridge, Toombs and others whose names he mentioned. He went on to say: 'I was opposed to the war at the outset. I wept when I heard of the bombardment of Fort Sumter. I sought retirement so that I might not hear or see any of the political leaders, the great end and aim of whose statesmanship was to precipitate the havoc that subsequently swept their fields and cities. But when Virginia, my native State, seceded, there was only one course for me to pursue—namely, to follow her fortunes.'

"Gen. Lee adverted to the character of Grant, of whom he spoke in the most friendly words and terms. He ascribed to him the possession of the noblest attributes of American manhood, and that he possessed all the requisites and talents for the organization of armies. In the generous terms accorded to the impoverished South, Grant won for himself imperishable renown, and they furnish a shining example of how bravely he could fight his country's battles, and of how nobody he could sympathize with the vanquished. In no quarter of the world has there been such magnanimity as that displayed by Grant, and of all the laurels won by the mighty Captain in our immortal struggle, the greenest and richest of them all is his splendid conduct to Lee and his soldiers. 'I wish,' said General Lee, 'to do simple justice to General Grant, when I say that his treatment of the Army of Southern Virginia is without a parallel in the history of the civilized world. When my poor soldiers, with famished faces, had neither food nor raiment, it was then that General Grant immediately issued the humane order that 40,000 rations should be furnished to the impoverished troops. And that was not all of his magnanimity. I was giving directions to one of my staff officers when making out the list of things to be surrendered to include the horses. At that moment General Grant, who seemed to be paying no attention to what was transpiring, quickly said, 'No, no, General Lee, not a horse—not one—keep them all! Your people will need them for the spring crops!'

"It was a scene never to be forgotten to watch Lee's manner, when, with a spirit of chivalry equal to his skill and gallantry, he told, with moistened eyes, this and many other instances of the magnanimity so nobly displayed by his illustrious rival. The conversation turned to General Sherman. The Southern papers were criticising very sharply Sherman's march through Georgia and Carolinas, and I asked General Lee what his views were of the great flanker. He said in substance: 'It has been observed that there is no character so uniformly bright as not to possess some dark stains, but while we assent to the general truth of this observation, that charity which hopeth all things should lead us to believe that there are no hearts so darkly vicious as not to be illumined by some beams of the light of virtue. To suppose Sherman an exception to this rule would be illiberal. The unbounded license which he allowed his soldiers in the States of Georgia and the Carolinas has greatly exaggerated the horrors of war. As a strategist and commander of men, Sherman has displayed the highest order of military genius. Throughout his recent campaign, when he had to pass through an unknown country, cross rivers, support his troops, etc., he certainly exhibited a singleness of purpose, a fertility of resource, which wins him a high place among famous soldiers of history. He seems to be cool without apathy, cautious without being dilatory, patient without being dispirited, personally brave, but never rash. Judged by Napoleon's test, 'Who did all that?' he is in my opinion, among the most successful of the Federal officers who have played a prominent part in the history of the war.'

"In the course of the conversation he spoke of Sheridan as a most brilliant and magnetic commander. I asked him who was the greatest of the Federal Generals. 'Indeed, sir, I have no hesitation in saying Gen. Grant. Both as a gentleman and an organizer of victorious war, General Grant hath excelled all your most noted soldiers. He has exhibited more true courage, more real greatness of mind, more consummate prudence from the outset, and more heroic bravery than any one on your side.'"

In the Jaws of a Lion.

I was out after porcupines, and was lying down one night near a porcupine's hole waiting for him to come out. I had no gun, but only my hunting-knife and my knobkerrie, with which to knock the porcupines on the nose; for that, you know, kills him at once. I did not hear a sound until I found the grass near me move and a lion put his paw on me and lifted me up. The brute pressed his claws into me, but luckily my leather belt prevented his teeth from damaging me, and he carried me by holding on my belt and coat. If either of these should have given way I should have been laid hold of in a far rougher manner. A lion is like a cat in one thing, he can hold a living creature in his mouth and not damage it, just as I have seen a cat carry a mouse. I knew the nature of the lion well enough to know that if I struggled I should have my neck broken or my head smashed in an instant, so I did not struggle, but quietly drew my knife and thought what best to do. I thought at first of trying to strike him in the heart, but I could not reach that part of him, and his skin looked so loose that I feared that could not strike him deep enough, carried as I was. I knew it would be life or death with me in an instant, so, turning myself a bit, I gashed the lion's nose, and cut it through. The lion dropped me as I should drop a poisonous snake, and and jumped away roaring with pain. He stood for an instant looking at me, but I did not move and he did not seem to like to carry me again. More than once he came up to within a few yards, licking the blood as it poured from his nose; but there I remained like a stone, and he was fairly afraid to tackle me again. I know a buffalo and an ox are very sensitive about the nose, and a cat if just tapped on the nose can't stand, so I thought a lion might be the same, and so it proved.

——In the English House of Commons the other night the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in answer to a question propounded by Mr. Jenkins, said that the ex-Khedive of Egypt, in leaving Cario, probably carried off a vast amount of "swag" but he was not prepared to say that it was worth $30,000,000, as rumored. He had no official knowledge on the subject. About the time that the profligate ex-Khedive packed up his baggage and started for Rhodes to spend the last of his disreputable days the English newspapers contained some interesting particulars concerning his domestic life. He took with him three of the four Princess wives allowed him by the Koran—the mother of Prince Tewfik remaining behind—and a harem of sixty women and twenty female attendants. This was a big sacrifice, for in the height of his prosperity he had at least a thousand women at his service. When Mr. Rivers Wilson made his report last year the income of his three principal wives was alone set down at £103,386 per year—a trifle over a half million dollars annually stolen from his poverty-stricken country. A correspondent says that when the exiled scoundrel left Cairo it took sixty of the viceregal carriages to convey the party from the palace of Abdin to the railway station and ten men-of-war's boats to embark the fair travelers at Alexandria. The harem luggage formed a small pyramid completely filling a lighter of 150 tons burden, and occupied over two hours in shipment. This was but a small portion of the female belongings of the Khedide, over 600 of whom remain behind in Cairo to be maintained by the present viceroy at a cost for feeding alone of $15,000 a month. It is surmised that the jewels carried off by Ismail Pasha are worth of themselves $10,000,000. The pension of the magnificent robber is to be $250,000 per year for the remainder of his life. It is to be hoped that poor Egypt will not long be required to carry this burden.

A ship carpenter at Belfast, Me., has concluded to spend the rest of his life in a chair. When wages were reduced he declined to work any longer, and seated himself in a rocking-chair near his sitting-room window. There he remains all day long, only rising to go to his meals or to bed. His chair rockers have worn groves in the floor, and on the window sill, where he drums idly as he rocks to and fro, are the imprints of his fingers. He is supposed to have same savings on which he and his wife live.

Albert Victor and George Frederick, sons of the Prince of Wales, were known by the nicknames of "Sprat" and "Herrings" on board the training ship Britania, where they recently completed the course with high honors.

CHESTER, Pa., Aug. 18.—William A. Todd, editor and proprietor of the Evening News, of this city, died this morning, after a lingering illness, aged 45 years.

—There is a fatal epidemic prevailing among the swine at Williamstown, Dauphin county. It is estimated that no less than 200 have died within the past two months.

—On Friday, August 8th, Gov. Hoyt signed the death warrant of Andrew Tracy, of McKean county, convicted in February last of the murder of his cousin, Mary Riley.

—Mr. A. J. Sanderson, formerly of Altoona, has purchased the Shippensburg Chronicle, a Democratic paper, which will be conducted by himself and brother, Alfred Sanderson.

—A man at Erie, while under fear of death, confessed to having killed James Meads, a porter in White's dental establishment in Philadelphia, and robbing the place of a large amount of gold, in 1865.

—Byron Collins and James M'Donnell, two of the fiends who were implicated in the assault upon a demented girl at Chestnut Hill, Lackawanna county, some time since, escaped from jail on Saturday morning.

—A boy named Risinger, in Beaver county, recently had both of his legs cut off by a mowing machine. The Lewisburg Journal says he never gave way to his terrible sufferings, but endured it with wonderful fortitude, and will live.

—The white horse rode by Gen. Reynolds when he was killed at the battle of Gettysburg, was in York on Friday. The animal was in charge of a party boarding at Mrs. Conley', says the York Daily, where the widow of Gen. Reynolds is staying at present.

—Ezra Reinhart, of Berks county, plowed up a nest containing twenty-two snake eggs. These were opened and all but one contained a reptile about ten inches long, while in the single egg were found two snakes each about eight inches long, connected with a single head.

—Highway robberies are becoming alarmingly prevalent in Schuylkill county. On Saturday evening the daughter of Congressman Ryan was stopped on the street in Pottsville and ordered to give up her money and jewelry, but she gave the alarm and assistance arrived in time to save her from the robbery.

—The governor on Friday issued warrants for the execution on October 9th of John O'Neill and Peter McManus, of Northumberland county, convicted of the murder of Conrad Besser, near Shamokin, and Andrew Tracey, of McKean county, convicted of the murder of a young woman to whom he was paying attentions.

—At a negro harvest home held at Gallow's hill, Chester county, Thursday afternoon, Dr. H. M. Turner, a colored orator, made a speech in which he warmly favored the emigration of his race from the United States to Africa, on the ground that they never had enjoyed and never could enjoy more than a nominal freedom in this country, either South or North.

—Ezra Lamborn, of West Bradford township, claims he has the cheapest and most accurate weather indicator known. It consists of a piece of calamus, which he carries in his pocket. When it becomes soft it is a sign of rain, and when hard clear weather will follow. He has tested it for a number of years, and is fully convinced that it is equal to any indicator known.—West Chester Republican.

—Dr. P. M. Nelson, hailing from Pittsburg, recently settled at Emporium, Cameron county, represented himself to be worth $100,000, dressed well and drove a fine team. He won the affections of a lady, and just as the knot was about to be tied an officer from Jefferson county arrested him for numerous crimes. He persuaded the officer to remove the handcuffs, slipped out the back door, and has not been seen since.

—The dead body of Samuel Albright, who murdered William K. Miller in Perry county on the 7th inst., was, according to the Huntingdon News, found Monday morning in a cave about two miles from Montgomery's Ferry, Perry county, where the murder was done. It is supposed that he committed suicide by shooting himself several days ago, as his body was partially decomposed. It was thought it was the body of a stranger until the father of Albright recognized it as that of his son.

—Peter Herdic is at Cape May and a newspaper correspondent speaks thus of him: "Peter Herdic, the fallen lumber king, is here. He doesn't seem weighed down under the indictments that threaten him. He has lost all his old power. There are men who express their belief that Herdic did not lose all his money in his failure, and that he is as rich to-day as he ever was. Of course he does not put on the splurge that was once his wont; but still, it costs money to winter in Florida, and travel here and there at pleasure."

—The secretary of war has approved the orders proposed by the chief of engineers (Gen. Wright) to commence a survey of the Susquehanna with a view to ascertaining the feasibility of navigating some portions of the stream. This scheme, it is stated, originated with Hon. Hendrick B. Wright, who entertained the idea that the branches of the river were navigable. The survey may add some fresh knowledge of the navigable possibilities of the vast but now practically useless, for commercial purposes, fluvial route for rafts from the mountain to the bay.

—The New York Times tries to hide behind a bantering tone the deep and natural chagrin that every New Yorker must feel when he learns that a Philadelphia woman was chosen to represent the Goddess of Liberty on the new silver dollar. The Times, in commenting upon the inevitable preference shown for Philadelphia by an artist of refined taste, who was searching for a handsome female face, observes: "There is an exulting conviction in the Philadelphia mind that after this New York must inevitably sink to the position of a second-rate city. No daughter of New York has ever had her portrait stamped on a dollar or any other coin. This means the New York profile is inferior to the Philadelphia profile."

Books, Magazines, &c.

—The Westminster Review for July (republished by the LEONARD SCOTT PUBLISHING Co., 41 Barclay street, N. Y.) opens with a long article on "Free Trade, Reciprocity, and Foreign Competition," denies that the stagnation of British trade is due to Free Trade policy, and combats the principal arguments urged in favor of Protection. 2. "The Federation of the English Empire," dwells fully on the subject of emigration, and shows that it would be wise for England to send emigrants to her own colonies rather than let them benefit foreign nations. 3 "Aryan Society." An attempt to compare the views expressed by the greatest of ancient writers and thinkers on the nature, origin, and history of some of the most impotrnt institutions of civilized society. 4. "State Papers. Charles I." 5. "The Life of the Prince Consort." 6. "Thephrastus Such." This, George Elliot's last work, is described as a book of valuable essays on feelings and foibles, enlivened here and there with the most genial humor. The Contemporary Literature is as full as usual, and there is another long article on "India and Our Colonial Empire."

PROF. HARRIS' RADICAL CURE

FOR SPERMATORRHŒA.

"SEMINAL PASTILLE."

A Valuable Discovery and New Departure in Medical Science, entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent Cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz: Direct Application to the principal seat of the Disease, acting by Absorption, and carrying its specific influences on the Seminal Vesicles, Ejaculatory Ducts, Prostate Gland and Urethra. The use of the Remedy is attended with no pain or inconvenience, it is quickly dissolved and soon absorbed, producing an immediate soothing and restorative effect upon the sexual and nervous organizations wrecked from self-abuse and excesses, stopping the drain from the system, restoring the mind to health and sound memory, removing the Dimness of Sight, Nervous Debility, Confusion of Ideas, Aversion to Society, etc., etc., and the appearance of premature old age usually accompanying this trouble, and restoring perfect Sexual Vigor, where it has been dormant for years. This mode of treatment has stood the test in very severe cases, and is now a pronounced success. Drugs are too much prescribed in these troubles, and, as many can bear witness to, with but little, if any permanent good. There is no nonsense about this preparation. Practical observation enables us to positively guarantee that it will give satisfaction.—During the eight years that it has been in general use, we have thousands of testimonials as to its value, and it is now conceded by the Medical Profession to be the most rational means yet discovered, of reaching and curing this very prevalent trouble, that is well known to be the cause of untold misery to so many, and upon whom quacks prey with their useless nostrums and big lies. The Remedy is put up in a neat box, enough to last a month, and sent in a plain wrapper by mail, sealed, for $3.—Two boxes (and best to effect a permanent cure unless in severe cases), $5—Three boxes (lasting three full months, (will stop emissions and restore vigor, in the worst cases), $7—Full DIRECTIONS for using will accompany EACH BOX.

Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never affected. Send Sealed (by stamp to any one. Sold ONLY by the

MANHOOD:

How Lost, How Restored.

Just Published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of SPERMATORRHŒA, or Seminal Weakness Involuntary Seminal Losses, IMPOTENCY, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage etc; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits; Induced by Self indulgence or sexual extravagance, &c.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only six cents.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice that the alarming consequences of Self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, postpaid, on receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps.

Local Department.

—August term of court is in full blast.

—New cider is on draught in several saloons in town.

—Large, richly-flavored sweet potatoes at Sechler's.

—Chicken thieves have been operating about Mill Hall.

—The bakery in Bush's Arcade sports a new ice cream sign.

—The State Normal School, at Lock Haven, opens September 2nd.

—The Commissioners are making some repairs in the county jail.

—Miss Ella McClain has been spending several weeks in Hollidaysburg.

—A new lot of hose has been ordered for the Logan Hose Company.

—What Bellefonte wants just now is another cheap excursion to Cape May.

—Yellow leaves are beginning to appear on some of the elm trees about town.

—The roof of the Bush House has been painted with a fire proof preparation.

—Delicious California fruits at Wilson's, corner of Allegheny and Bishop streets.

—There was a great deal of thunder and lightning on Friday night, but very little rain.

—There hasn't been a decent dog fight in town for four days. This is a pretty state of affairs.

—All the big towns around here are having wheelbarrow contests. Bellefonte, where are you?

—We are going to "wade into" an oyster stew next week. Next month has an "R" in it, you know.

—Mr. Daniel Garman, proprietor of the Garman House, is touring in the northern part of the State.

—E. & E. M. Blanchard have moved into their new office in Judge Irvin's new building on High street.

—Wild plums, it is said, are very plenty about here. Loafers should shoulder their basket and start out.

—Buckwheat is going to be plenty in this vicinity, and the pimple crop will probably be correspondingly large.

—Anybody can have the colic now-a-days. Watermelons were selling in town last week for twenty-five cents.

—The Catholic Sunday-school picniced on Wednesday last in the grove near the toll gate, above Valentines' Iron Works.

—Mr. James Sommerville has erected a new office at his tannery at Snow Shoe Intersection, and put in Fairbanks' scales.

—Somerset county people woke up the other morning and found their mountains covered with snow. Not very bad for August.

—There will be a union Sunday-school picnic at Unionville on Saturday next, given under the auspices of the Methodist Sunday-school.

—But few people from Bellefonte attended the Union county harvest home picnic, at Lewisburg, on Thursday. It was most too far away.

—Ed. Speer, formerly in the telegraph office at this place, was at home last week on a visit. Ed is now night operator at Goldsboro, York county.

—The Altoona soap works have suspended, and now the Altoona editors are worried to know where they'll get enough soap for their next semi-monthly wash.

—According to a number of reports we have seen in papers published outside of the county, all there is left of General Beaver's farm is the barn, and the bugs have begun on that.

—It has occurred to one of our exchanges that a man was never known to be struck by lightning while paying his subscription to a paper. Subscribers should make a note of this.

—We are informed that a young man from this vicinity became so "enthusiastic" at Wayne camp-meeting, on Sunday, that he forgot himself and came home without his hat or shoes.

—Guggenheimer, the dry goods man, has closed his store on Allegheny street, and moved back to his old stand on High street, where he will be pleased to meet his old customers.

—Prof. Bauer, the writing master, has finished his labors at Unionville, and is now starting a writing school at Eagleville. His pupils at Unionville are all very much pleased with the progress they have made.

Veteran Club Reunion.

The sixth annual reunion and basket picnic of the Veteran Club of Centre county, will be held in Gettle's Grove, Pleasant Gap, on Saturday, September 6th.

For the benefit of those who may not understand the motives of this order, we give the following particulars. The name of the society, as will be seen above, is "The Veteran Club of Centre County," and the officers consist of a president, vice president, secretary and treasurer, who, with an additional member from each township, constitute the executive committee. The officers serve one year, unless, for some reason, there should be no election, when these filling the positions would continue to hold the offices. The club has one regular meeting in each year, on the Saturday falling on or immediately preceding the 12th of September, and at such place in Centre county as may be fixed by the executive committee. Each member pays an entrance fee of one dollar upon joining the club, and an annual fee of fifty cents each year thereafter. The treasurer is required to give bond in the sum of one thousand dollars, with surety, for the faithful performance of his duties. Persons not eligible to regular membership may, in the discretion of the club, be elected honorary members at any regular meeting.

The main object of these reunions is to revive and renew the ties of friendship formed by soldiers with their comrades-in-arms, and to enroll the veterans who have not heretofore joined the club.

—The Brockerhoff House baggage truck sometimes gets frisky, and has been known to balk. The other afternoon, in coming down High street, it broke loose from the 'bus and started in the direction of water street, leaving three or four big trunks in the middle of the street.

—Engine No. 5, of the Snow Shoe railroad, which was considerably damaged by fire in the round house some time in the spring, is again ready for service. It has been repainted and re-lettered, and the iron work polished up, and looks like a brand new engine.

—Mr. Charles Clements, who has occupied the position of clerk in Valentines' stores for over a year, left on Tuesday last for Kansas City. Mr. Clements is a genial and obliging gentleman, and won many warm friends during his stay in Bellefonte.

—The Centennial Temperance Club entertainment, to be given on the 18th of September, will be a musical treat. Prof. Stradling, Mrs. John G. Love, the Bearly brothers, of Milesburg, and other musical talent will take part in the instrumental exercises.

—On Wednesday night of last week robbers broke into the store of Mr. Robert Barnes, at Pleasant Gap, and took away with them five or six dollars in money, a watch and several other articles. They seem to be at work all over the county.

—An exchange says a Williamsport man claims to have in his posession a bat that weighs four pounds. We have a suspicion that this is the same kind of a bat that Theodore Deschner once had on exhibition. His was a four-pound brick-bat.

—The Lewistown Gazette, in its last issue, published a cut of Richard Smith Elliott, secretary of Eads' Jetty Company. He was born in Lewistown, Pa., on July 10, 1817, and is the son of William P. and Emily Elliott.

—Mr. William Myers, of Milesburg, has an eye to cool comfort. He has erected an observatory, or lookout, in a large willow tree in his front yard, about fifteen feet from the ground, and will seat ten or twelve people.

—Diamonds, it is said, attract lightning to a dangerous extent. Perhaps people think that's the reason we never wear our thousand dollar diamond studs. But it isn't. We haven't got any.

—If the boys who run their velocipedes about the depot when the trains are coming in and departing are not more careful, there'll be a boy and a velocipede less in town one of these days.

—The Centre Reporter still insists that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has taken charge of the Snow Shoe road. That paper will have the road built from here to Lemont next.

—Messrs. Kremble & McCollough, of Clearfield, are fitting up the vacant room in McClain's building, next to the Watchman office, and will open a fruit store and oyster saloon.

—Read the agricultural department in this week's issue of the REPUBLICAN. It will be found very interesting to our farmer friends.

—The Rev. Mr. Hewitt being out of town, there were no services in the Episcopal church on Sunday last.

A Cat's Fondness for Rats.

The Watchman, in its last issue, gives the following account of the peculiar conduct of a cat owned by Mr. James Alexander, of this place: "The cat had a litter of kittens a few days ago, and while nursing them she captured a couple of small rats and took them to where she had her kittens. The rats appeared to be well pleased with their new quarters, and would frisk and play about the cat the same as the kittens, the cat in the meantime nursing and suckling them the same as her own offspring. Mr. Alexander, thinking that the rat increase was fast enough, as it was, wanted to dispose of the pets in short order, but the cat made quite a fuss and did not want to give up her pets at all. A few hours after the rats had been dispatched, the cat was seen to bring a half grown rat to where the kittens were. It was amusing to see her trying to keep the rat in the nest; it would jump out every time she put it in, until it was killed and taken from her."

—The Altoona Tribune gives the following account of a turkey's singular ride on a locomotive: "On Sunday afternoon as the Pacific east was running along at the usual rate just east of Harrisburg the engineer noticed a flock of turkeys on the track and ran into them. He noticed that one of them did not get out of the way, and when he was oiling his engine at Lancaster he looked around the front part of the locomotive and found Mr. Turkey perched up under the body of the engine on the shute used for taking water while running. He took it out and it was not hurt in the least, as far as he could see, and took it to his home. The turkey had taken a ride of thirty miles or more, and considering the way he 'got aboard' it was a novel ride."

—The new brick building on High street, erected by Judge Irvin, to be used as a law office, is furnished and ready for occupancy. The office on the ground floor contains one of the handsomest and most substantial book cases we have ever seen. It is built of chestnut with walnut trimmings, and was put up by Mr. Henry Harris. The work was performed by Mr. John Proudfoot, and is a well-executed piece of workmanship.

—Here is a simple remedy for rattlesnake bites which it would be well to remember: "A young man named Rager, of Indiana county, was bitten by a rattlesnake recently. He immediately cut an onion in two pieces, taking out the heart, filled it with salt, and applied it to the wound. He changed it occasionally for two hours and then went to work again none the worse for the bite."

—Mr. Frank McKean, of Zion, Walker township, died on Tuesday of last week of paralysis, aged 77 years. He was a grandson of Thomas McKean, who signed the Declaration of Independence. He was a firm friend of the Republican cause, and a most estimable gentleman.

—On Friday, a few minutes before noon, fire was discovered in a dwelling house on Thomas street, owned by Isaac Haupt and occupied by a colored family. The alarm was given and the fire department quickly responded, but its services were not needed, the fire having been extinguished by a few buckets of water. The fire was caused, we believe, by a defective flue.

—When the alarm of fire was given on Friday some excited individual, whose name we did not learn, fell off the depot steps. He had a very peculiar walk when he went back into the depot, and we guess something besides his feelings were hurt.

—The Millonian reports that a farm in Union county threshed 450 bushels of wheat taken from an eight-acre patch. The Centre Reporter steps up, though, and intimates that the above is a harvest lie. This may lead to bloodshed.

—If the three little darkey boys who drove around behind the depot on Friday at a pretty smart jog had gone about a sixteenth of an inch nearer the building, they might have been upset and had their necks broken.

—The local of the Democrat has "given himself away," so to speak. He says Sunday evening of last week was the darkest of the season, which explains the peculiar noise we heard in our tomato patch that night.

—H. J. Barnes has purchased the Bellefonte and Milroy stage route. He is making some needed alterations in the coaches, which will add to the comfort of passengers, and has reduced the fare.

—A hand organ man was in town last week, but the crowd of boys that followed him around was no comparison to the crowd of men and women continually rushing to Sechler's for groceries.

One Hundred and Twenty-Five Miles in a Buggy.

In the Lancaster Intelligencer we find the following account of a one hundred and twenty-five mile ride in a buggy, from Bellefonte to Lancaster, by those two retired carriage makers, John R. Bartroff and Geo. B. Wilson:

"John R. Bartroff, carriage maker, formerly of this city, and George B. Wilson, also of this city, started from Bellefonte, Centre county, on Friday morning, in a no-top buggy, and drove the whole distance to Lancaster, one hundred and twenty-five miles, arriving here on Monday afternoon at four o'clock. Their route lay via Mifflintown, the Narrows, Harrisburg, etc., through a portion of the loveliest scenery of eastern Pennsylvania, and the adventurous travelers express themselves delighted with the trip, not the least pleasant feature of which was their novel mode of conveyance. The actual time occupied in driving was twenty-two hours, which is of course exclusive of stoppages for rest and refreshment."

—Mr. McCloskey, the sewing machine man, came across a huge rattlesnake while driving down the Snow Shoe mountains one day last week. It was an old settler, and was in no hurry to get out of the way, so the gallant Mr. C. immediately alighted from his carriage, armed himself with a club and dispatched his snakeship, which measured over four feet in length.

—We would like to know who it was shouting fire so lustily from behind Brown's coal yard, on Friday, when the alarm of fire was given. The yelling was all right, of course, only if there is a man around here with steam lungs and a voice like a Cape Cod fog horn, we'd like to know who he is. He ought to be hired by the year to yell at fires.

—The Lutheran Sunday-school, of this place, held its picnic last Thursday, on Nittany mountain. Notwithstanding there was a brisk shower about dinner time, which caused a general scattering for places of shelter, everybody enjoyed themselves, and say that Nittany mountain is the place to hold a picnic.

—We have heard that parties about here have been hunting squirrels for the past week or ten days. For the benefit of those who may have been misinformed, we would state that this is a violation of the game laws, and is punishable by fine. Squirrels cannot be taken before the first of September.

—Squire Weaver lost another horse last week. While coming into town his horse took sick, near Judge Orvis' place, and was turned into a field over night. On going to look after the animal the next morning he was found dead.

—Burchfield's Mountain City Band gave an open air concert on the Diamond Saturday evening. Of course it was much enjoyed by the great crowd of people present. Nothing like music to enliven a town.

—The Court House yard is a nice place in which to stretch yourself when the thermometer creeps up to one hundred. At least we know of a number of gentlemen who think so.

—Editor Grow, of the Lock Haven Journal, got a change from his regular diet of weak gurel and red herring, last Thursday. Some sympathizing individual laid a big cake on his table.

—Miss Molly Nesbit, one of the efficient teachers in our public schools, has returned from McAllisterville, Juniata county, where she has been visiting friends for several weeks.

—Mr. Philip Teats, of the Altoona dairy, in company with Miss Musser, a pleasant young lady from Unionville, paid their respects to the REPUBLICAN office last Saturday.

—Picnicers and other visitors to Nittany mountain can ascend the observatory lately erected at that point and gaze upon the valley below for the modest sum of ten cents.

—It is said that one of the most interesting features of the printers' picnic, at Cresson, will be a foot-race, in which all the imps of Juniata valley will contest for honors.

—Harry Hicks has had the telephone extended to his residence on Linn street, and can now tell to a minute when his "grub" is ready.

—Last Thursday and Friday were pretty good specimens of Fourth of July weather. We found it so in our office, anyhow.

—Captain John Morrison and his brother, Hugh Morrison, of Baltimore, visited Philipsburg last week.

—Smokers, if you haven't tried Harry Green's "boss" cigars, do so. Nothing like them.

—Carpenters are at work reshingling the north wing of the Bush House.

—It is rumored that there will be a marriage in this vicinity before long.

—See to it that you are registered before it is too late.

Sunday at Clintondale.

CAMP-MEETING NOTES TAKEN ON THE FLY.

The camp-meeting at this place closes next Thursday.

There was some very fine singing by the choir in the afternoon.

"The woods were full of 'em" on Sunday afternoon—teams, we mean.

One of the reverend gentlemen present preached to the boys on Sunday forenoon.

It was estimated that between four and five thousand people were on the grounds on Sunday.

No intoxicating liquors are sold on the grounds, so the people carry their "medicine" with them.

Every available tent and berth on the grounds was occupied during the last days of the meeting.

Bellefonte was well represented on Sunday, between thirty and forty people being present from town.

Notwithstanding the large number of teams present there were no accidents of any consequence during the day.

Clintondale, we were informed, drew larger crowds this year than Wayne-Station. This will make Lock Haven mad.

No members of the light-fingered brigade were discovered on the grounds. At least no pockets were picked that we heard of.

Those who have charge of the camp-meeting grounds might cart off several hundred ton of stones and still have enough left to fall over.

There were more intoxicated people on the grounds on Sunday than on all the other days of the meeting. Be it said, however, to the credit of Bellefonte, that none of her representatives were included in this list.

The restaurants have been doing a good business. Sunday everything was crowded, and the man who started out about eleven o'clock for his dinner would, if he was a good worker, get sight of the table somewhere near three in the afternoon.

Everybody present on Sunday seemed to be good-natured, and there were no pugilistic encounters or other disorderly conduct, with the exception of drunkenness, to mar the religious influences of the day's proceedings.

Mr. John Kinsley, formerly of the Singer sewing machine agency of Bellefonte, now of Lock Haven, drove into the camp on Sunday in the biggest kind of style with a two-horse turnout. He was sandwitched in between two or three Lock Haven damsels, and was smiling in three or four languages.

Mr. Emmerick, the boarding-house man, knows how to get up a good dinner, and makes his house attractive and homelike. He has only one fault, he allows a man to eat too much. One man took advantage of his generosity, and if somebody hadn't laughed at him at a critical moment he would have eaten through to the floor.

In rambling about the grounds about dinner time we run right kersmack against Torence McCloskey, of Lock Haven, who seemed as much confused as we were at the abrupt salute. Mr. K. was at one time canvasser for the REPUBLICAN, and is now doing similar work for a Lock Haven paper. He is an expert canvasser and a first-rate fellow every way you take him.

A seat in front of the preacher's stand, occupied by a number of women, gave away during the afternoon service. We were sitting directly behind, when a big farmer reached under the board and brought out a plug hat which looked as though it had been through a country cheese press, muttering something about "cussed awkwardness" we came pretty near letting out a guffaw.

Some things are not very conveniently arranged at Clintondale. Now, for instance, take the water question. If a man wants a drink he can satisfy his thirst by walking up the creek about two miles, falling over fences and traveling through people's cow pastures. Of course, there is one other thing he can do—go without it. A pipe might be laid from this spring to the grounds with very little expense. Then here's another thing that ought to be attended to: There are no horse-sheds on the grounds, and a person often has to choose between putting up in a hen-coop or hitching to a tree out in the woods somewhere.

—The new coal breaker at the Snow Shoe coal yard in this place was given a trial last week, but did not give entire satisfaction. When the machinery becomes a little worn, it will work more smoothly and with better results.

—If you want a first-class cigar, call on Harry Green, at Green's drug store. He can supply your wants.

—Green county has a school teacher 80 years old, and is now teaching his seventy-fourth term.

—Special Officer Dolan, while in Altoona one day last week, discovered a watch, in the possession of a woman, which answered the description of a warrant he carried in his pocket, and seized it. It is a gold, open-faced watch, and was stolen some time ago by parties now in the penitentiary. The watch is supposed to belong to some party in Williamsport, and can be had by proving property. Williamsport papers, take notice!

—A grand musical concert, for the benefit of the Centennial Temperance Club, will be given on the 18th of September. The concert will consist of the best amateur performers in Centre county. This promises to be one of the finest entertainments of the season.

—Mr. R. A. Laird and Jesse Stewart, of this place, have the contract for building a fine stone residence at the College, to be occupied by Prof. C. A. Smith, professor of chemistry at the College.

—Our high constable continues to rush the cows into the pound that are found roaming about town. This is business, and the only way to break up the bad practice.

—We are agents for Sawyer's Woolen Mills; and also for Kipper's foreign woolens. The finest fabrics. All wool suits to order, Twelve and one-half Dollars.

21tf MONTGOMERY & Co., Tailors.

—Four rooms and one dwelling house with eight rooms, on Lamb street, for rent at reasonable rates. Inquire of William Jones, ag't, 1st National Bank. 16 tf

—A couple of Italian singers, males, were on our streets one night last week.

—Chew Jackson's best sweet navy tobacco. vol 11-5-1y

WINE FOR SICKLY PERSONS.—Speer's Port Grape Wine is unexcelled by any other in its mellow juciness, richness of flavor and brilliancy of color. Physicians say it is superior to imported port for invalids, and in summer it is more agreeable and refreshing than claret. Clergymen use it, for its purity, as a communion wine. This wine is well known, and highly appreciated by weakly females and aged persons, and for communion. 33-2t

Bellefonte Markets.

BELLEFONTE, Aug. 27, 1879.

Court week generally adds something in the way of trade to our merchants. As the attendance at court this week is quite up to the average, we trust that those in want of supplies will read our advertisements, and learn where they may get the worth of their money.

GRAIN—There is very little interest taken in any grain offered in our market except wheat. The short crop will not more than supply the mills and stores, which sell flour to their customers. Owing to the demand, prices will be maintained, as the mills cannot afford to allow any to be shipped. One dollar per bushel is now above the price wheat will net in the eastern market.
